Auto Workers Leave Plants As 'Sit-Down' Strike Ends

G.M. Officials Announce Flint Factories Will Open Monday.

Beleaguered Men Are Given Ovation

Some Issues Not Settled to Be Ironed Out in Conference.

By the Associated Press.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 11.—Jubilant strikers marched from three General Motors plants late today with all the fanfare of a war-time armistice.

Peace has come at last to strike-vexed Flint.

The United Automobile Workers of America, moving swiftly to carry out its part of the strike peace treaty signed at noon today in Detroit, submitted the agreement to the "men in the trenches" as soon as leaders could rea : the strike capital. The vote for acceptance was unanimous.

Doors of Fisher Plant No. 1, heavily barricaded since December 30 against attacks that never came, swung open at 5:40 p. m. In a deafening din of automobile horns and the plant whistle the evacuation was on.

General Motors officials, moving just as swiftly to resume production, announced that the plants would reopen Monday.

900 Leave No. 1.

Two thousand men marched from the No. 1 plant, but hundreds of them had gone in during the afternoon. Best estimates were that 900 were true veterans of the prolonged strike.

Many of the men, clean shaven when the strike began, wore heavy beards as symbols of their self-imposed 44-day incarceration.

Members of a "bearded band" played furiously on their instruments, but their efforts were nearly lost in the automobile horns and the cheers.

Fifty men, as exuberant as college boys, weaved about deliriously in a snake dance.

At the head of the procession that formed rapidly was a huge American flag. Just before the men emerged a sign 100 feet long and 5 feet deep was lowered from the roof. In mammoth red letters it proclaimed that "Victory Is Ours."

In the procession, but not at its head, were high officials of the U. A. W. A., among them Homer Martin, the president; Wyndham Mortimer, first vice president, who was a signatory to the peace treaty, and Lee Pressman, general counsel of the Committee for Industrial Organization, who also signed the strike-ending agreement.

Some Issues Not Settled.

Detroit, Feb. 11 (AP).—Formal acceptance of peace terms ended today the most widespread strike ever to paralyze American automobile assembly lines.

The eight-point agreement signed by representatives of General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers of America composed many of the differences aired in 44 days of bitter labor dispute.

Remaining issues will be negotiated in discussions between corporation and union, starting February 16.

The union was accorded recognition as representing its members in the corporation's 69 automotive plants. In 20 plants where strikes are in progress, General Motors agreed not to bargain, without the sanction of the Governor of the State, with any other group on "matters of general corporation policy."

Five-Cent Wage Increase.

More than 100,000 idle employes of the Nation's largest motor car producer will return to their jobs next week at wages increased 5 cents an hour. The wage increase, approximating $25,000,000 annually, was announced by General Motors coincident with the strike settlement.

General Motors agreed to dismissal of injunction proceedings against the union, its officers and members at Flint and Cleveland, Ohio. The Flint injunction had made the union men liable to a $15,000,000 penalty.

The ceremonies of signing the peace pact in a crowded recorder's courtroom in the County Building here came as an anti-climax to the dramatic announcement at 2:35 a. m. by Michigan's 43-year-old bachelor Governor, red-headed Frank Murphy, that—

"An agreement has been reached."

This brief statement in a downtown hotel where John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, participated in final conferences at the bedside

Mecury Hits 20; Relief From Cold Is Forecast Today

The temperature dropped to 20 degrees above zero yesterday, giving Washington the second coldest day of the winter. The coldest day was December 1, when the mercury descended to 14 degrees.

Despite the drop in temperature yesterday morning, the day was pleasant, the cold being tempered by a warm sun.

Today, according to the Weather Bureau, will be fair and a bit warmer.

Moonlight Shimmers at Midnight From Ageless Marble Hall Where Lincoln Sits Enshrined, Surveying City's Stately Buildings Down Leafy Vista; Ever-Increasing Throngs Visit Memorial.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Abraham Lincoln sat at midnight in his temple of marble, his trouble-worn features bathed in the glow of floodlights that cast somber shadows on the wall behind.

The solitary guard consulted his watch, and the coincidence of the hour and minute hands, pointed straight upward, gave him the cue to go to the switch-box and surrender the sad gentleman to the night.

One, two, three draws of the levers and the shrine was in total darkness, its central figure looking out unseen upon the Capital City of the Nation whose union he preserved.

It was a clear, cold night, with a fresh wind whistling through the columns, and the guard seemed not displeased to have someone to talk to. Standing beside one of the pillars which frame the statue as you walk up the steps, he followed the ceaseless gaze of Lincoln across the beautiful landscape.

The Reflecting Pool, while preserving a hazy image of the Washington Monument, fidgeted nervously in the wind. It was as though invisible elves were using the basin for a nocturnal gamboling ground. Beyond, the towering shaft stood as always, a finger raised everlastingly to the heavens. To the left obtruded the familiar face of the old postoffice building clock. To the right, the street lights of distant Nichols avenue in Anacostia resembled a Brobdingnagian necklace.

It was a sight the appreciation of which is made the greater by silence, but words have a way of taking one's mind off physical discomfort, which in this instance happened to be induced by a falling thermometer.

And so the conversation was of the marble effigy inside, of the millions who come from near and far

Britain Plans Defense Loan Of Two Billions

French Cabinet Is Called; May Take Action in Spanish War.

The European Situation.

The British government decided it would float a defense loan of "not more than" $2,000,000,000 as the German Ambassador arrived to make formal demand for restoration of colonies.

The French cabinet was called to meet in extraordinary session as indications grew the nation might take a hand in the Spanish civil war.

Heavy fighting raged around Madrid, with loyalists claiming to have driven back the rebels.

Two more high Russian officials were reported being questioned by Soviet secret police as ramifications of the recent conspiracy trial spread.

Defense Loan.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 11.—Admitting its present revenues could not take care of its rearmament program, the British government disclosed today it would float a defense loan of "not more than" $2,000,000,000.

The announcement came from Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain in the House of Commons.

During 1937 alone, he said, Britain will spend $850,000,000 in building up her defensive strength.

The loan, Chamberlain said, will

Sneedville, Tenn., Feb. 11 (AP).—The Rev. Walter Lamb, 53-year-old mountain preacher who married 9-year-old Eunice Winstead and 22-year-old Charlie Johns for a $1 fee, is getting plenty of "fan mail."

"I've got a lot of letters from strangers," he said. "Some of them tell me I done right, but others are chunkin' at me."

The red-haired clergyman repeated his plea that "If I had knowed she was so young I'd not have married them. She looked like she was 12 or 14 years old to me."

He added he hated to have his picture taken so much, but explained that "I'm scared that if I don't people will think I'm ashamed of what I have done."

Man Shot Himself To Avoid Freezing To Death, Verdict

Carson City, Nev., Feb. 11 (AP).—A coroner's jury found today that Earl La Near, 22, whose body was found near Clear Creek canyon yesterday, shot himself to avoid death by freezing and exhaustion.

La Near's wife and 2-year-old daughter, rescued Saturday after spending nine days snowbound in their automobile, are recovering here. He had left the automobile in search of aid.

The family was en route to Alameda, Calif., from Leadville, Colo., when trapped in a blizzard.

Carolina Town Arms to Fight Against Threats of Terrorists

By the Associated Press.

Shallotte, N. C., Feb. 11.—Residents of the Hickman's crossroads community near here armed themselves tonight against night riders whose latest threats have launched investigations by both State and Federal authorities.

R. B. Long, 40-year-old farmer, told a Wilmington Star-News reporter that about 25 men in the section had banded themselves to fight against the terrorists—whose letters sometimes refer to the band as "Christians" and at other times are signed "KKK."

Long said that the men of the community moved under heavy arms at night, and that shotguns stood near all doors during the day.

Long, even as Sheriff J. A. Russ went to nearby Exun to investigate a report that two women there had received one of the threatening letters, said he had received a similar missive, which accused him of drinking too much and mistreating his family, and warning:

"We'll see you later."

Earl Fennel, 28-year-old farmer who lives just across the State line in Horry County (South Carolina), near where Monroe Fowler was flogged a year ago, likewise reported receipt of a penciled note, which he said appeared to have been written by a woman, and signed "KKK," in which he was told the band planned "to wait on you."

The latest letters were additions to a series which have aroused residents of a wide area over a period of two years which has seen at least eight actual floggings.

Oldest Alexandria Resident Told of Emancipator; Rites Tomorrow.

Mrs. Laura Fiske Evans, Alexandria's oldest resident, who remembered seeing President Lincoln ride through the streets of strife-weary Washington, died late yesterday at her home, 322 South St. Asaph street. She would have been 102 years old on June 22.

Although her illness was brief, Mrs. Evans had been virtually confined to the second floor of her home for several years. From the windows of her room she could look upon the flower garden she had tended carefully until old age forced her indoors.

Born in Howard Valley, Conn., in 1835, Mrs. Evans was the daughter of Bingham and Lydia Fiske. Her grandfather, the Rev. David Avery, had served throughout the Revolutionary War with the American Army, from Bunker Hill until the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown.

At the time of Mrs. Evans' birth, President Andrew Jackson was in the White House. His latest message to Congress had urged legislation to ban anti-slave pamphlets from the mails. The Democratic national convention, in session at Baltimore, was nominating Martin Van Buren for the Presidency. A $20,000,000 fire had swept New York and James Gordon Bennett was putting out the

5 Fliers, Civilian Die as Nazi Plane Crashes in Berlin

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 11.—Six persons died today when a tri-motored army plane, cut off from a nearby landing field by a curtain of driving snow, crashed against a crowded Berlin market place and burst into flames near a cage of circus lions.

Five of the dead were occupants of the plane. The sixth was a trolley conductor, burned fatally by a charged wire which the plane ripped away.

Panic swept the square for an hour, and the roar of the 15 lions, part of a traveling circus, rose above the cries of terrified trolley passengers and pedestrians.

The plane fell about a half mile from new barracks of the regiment named after Adolf Hitler's aide, Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, and a short distance from a wide meadow in Schiller Park, which offered safe landing had the pilots been able to find it.

Victory Seen By Catholics In 'Rebellion'

Mexican Churches May Be Reopened Legally by Laymen Groups.

Cardenas Considers Plan When Police, Troops Are Defied.

By the Associated Press.

Orizaba, Vera Cruz State, Mexico, Feb. 11.—Orizaba Catholics, in "peaceful rebellion" over anti-church legisaltion, rejoiced tonight upon hearing President Lazaro Cardenas was considering letting them reopen their churches lawfully.

They received word through widely distributed handbills that the federal governmnet was preparing to turn the edifices over to "laymen's committees."

Excitement, which had mounted steadily since Sunday's police raid upon clandestine Catholic worshipers, in which 14-year-old Leonor Sanchez, cafe waitress, was shot and killed, subsided.

Of the city's 14 churches, four were open tonight.

All 14 had been reopened by the people Tuesday, but police unexpectedly closed them again at 8 a. m. today.

Four Churches Reopened.

Police and soldiers stood back when, four hours later, the Catholics en masse bore down again upon the four most prominently located buildings and reopened them.

Gov. Miguel Aleman, who came from Jalapa, pleaded for prudence, but added a warning police would be "forced to intervene, if necessary, to maintain order."

Reports received by Catholic leaders from Mexico City were that President Cardenas had instructed the treasury department—custodian of all churches under legislation nationalizing church property—to study the question of turning the buildings over to "laymen's committees."

This was the procedure in many states where anti-church restrictions of the early stages of the revolution have been lessened.

But Vera Cruz, which barred all worship since the radical governorship of Adalberto Tejda in 1924-28, so far has not followed suit.

Police Pushed Back.

In the early afternoon, amid growing excitement, crowds broke through a cordon of police surrounding the City Hall and rushed into the building in an attempt to interview Gov. Aleman.

Finding him gone, they made a round of the hotels in search of him only to hear reports he had left by automobile for Santa Rosa and Cordoba, to which the religious agitation had spread.

One youth climbed the tallest church tower and fastened to it the national flag and a banner demanding religious liberty.

Exultant crowds yesterday took possession of 14 churches here, spurred by the killing Sunday of a girl worshiper in a police raid on a secret mass.

Public indignation was increased today as an unconfirmed rumor circulated that two persons understood to have been wounded in the raid also had died.

Authorities reclosed the churches at 8 o'clock this morning, but almost the entire population of Orizaba streamed into the streets at noon in an impressive demonstration as word of the closing got around.

50,000 in Demonstration.

The populace stormed the churches. Again the steeple bells pealed. Hundreds of firecrackers were set off. The noisy throng paraded the streets with banners demanding religious liberty. Traffic was blocked. Stores closed their doors.

It was estimated 50,000 persons took part in the demonstration.

Catholic faithful in Santa Ana and Atzacumas reopened a church after a parade last night headed by musicians who sang religious hymns and the national anthem.

Crowds invaded churches at the factory villages of Rio Blanco, Nogales, Santa Rosa and others. At the city of Vera Cruz yesterday a group clambered over walls of the Asuncion Church, rang the bells and opened the doors. The building was filled quickly by a throng, who evacuated peacefully when soldiers arrived.

Court Bill Vote Delay Planned as Supporters Seek Farm, Labor Aid

Light Docket in Supreme Court May Bring April Adjournment

High Judicial Body Has Recessed at Least Once Each Term Since 1932; Records Indicate No Congestion.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

So free is the Supreme Court docket of congestion that attaches of the tribunal yesterday expressed anticipation that early in April the court will be forced to adjourn in the middle of a week assigned for hearing of arguments because of a lack of cases ready to be heard.

At the present time there are only 31 cases on the court calendar ready for hearing. The court will recess next Monday for two weeks—for the purpose of preparing opinions in cases already heard—and reconvene for hearing arguments again on March 1. In the next two weeks it is expected the tribunal will hear arguments in at least 25 cases. A recess for another two-week period of opinion preparation will then be taken.

When the court reconvenes on March 29 for another two-week period of arguments it is not believed there will be sufficient cases ready for hearing to keep it busy for the fully allotted period and that in all probability the tribunal will be forced to recess its hearings around April 7 or 8 for a lack of ready cases.

It is possible that about that time the Senate will be engaged in a heated debate over President Roosevelt's plan "to supplement the work of older judges and accelerate the work of the court." The President in his message to Congress a week ago declared congestion of Federal Court dockets—including the Supreme Court—inspired him to seek immediate remedial action. His plan would authorize him to name an additional judge for each member of the Supreme Court and other Federal tribunals for every incumbent judge now on the bench who is over 70 years of age and has served 10 years. Under his plan the size of the Supreme Court could be increased nine to a maximum of 15 members.

A detailed survey of the condition of the Supreme Court dockets over the last 10 years, conducted by The Washington Post, indicates that dur-

National Strike Action Urged in Supreme Court

Federal Legislation May Be Solution, Cummings' Assistant Says.

By Sidney Olson.

The vast General Motors strike, which was concluded yesterday, "suggests that the problem itself of labor relations in this country is of such a national character as to justify Congressional intervention," Charles E. Wyzanski, special assistant to the Attorney General, told the Supreme Court yesterday.

Wyzanski was making a general concluding plea in arguing Constitutionality of the Wagner Labor Relations act, which five companies have attacked this week in separate suits.

The court, which heard the final three cases yesterday, will recess Monday after handing down opinions. Resuming hearings March 1, any Monday thereafter they may hand down the fateful decision, which should clearly indicate whether the Administration can draft pro-labor legislation within the Constitution.

NIRA Cited.

Wyzanski's reference to the automobile strike came after Attorney Thomas Long, representing the Fruehauf Trailer Co., of Michigan, had asserted: "It is a well-known fact that the auto industry heretofore has been free of labor troubles. There have never been interruptions in its labor relations, affecting the flow of commerce, except through Federal interference." He cited the Chevrolet strike of 1935, coming "after the NIRA act," as indications of the truth of this statement.

Wyzanski, in rebuttal, said:

"This argument is interesting. The attorney says that the question is whether the State of Michigan shall say whether this industry, largely within its borders, shall have imposed upon it 'excessive restrictions,' or be allowed to operate 'freely.'

"The Court will recognize the intense public interest in the present grave situation, and its significance.

"Today there is the spectacle of two colossal forces standing astride the stream of commerce in that very State."

Supreme Court Plan Perilous, Asserts Norris

Senator Says Other Ways Can End War on New Deal Measures.

By William V. Nessly.

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, long a staunch supporter of President Roosevelt's policies, emerged from a lengthy conference with the Chief Executive yesterday convinced there is "danger" in the President's proposal for reorganizing the Supreme Court.

He will vote for the plan if it is the only remedy for meeting the court's opposition to New Deal enactments, he said, but insisted "we've not reached that point." There are other remedies, he said, through mere legislation as well as by constitutional amendment.

Returning to his office from the White House conference, Norris emphasized later he did not want to confine action to seeking a constitutional amendment.

Would Exercise Power.

"There is no objection to going ahead with any legislative remedies available and a constitutional amendment at the same time," he said.

"Getting an amendment is a slow process. I don't think we ought to depend on that alone. We ought to exercise what power we have under the Constitution.

"The present condition is intolerable and something must be done to prevent the courts from legislating instead of Congress. I am willing to resort to any method to get the remedy that the country must have, provided it is constitutional. The President's proposal is not unconstitutional."

Norris said assertions the President was trying to become a dictator were all nonsense.

Points Out Perils.

There is "danger" in the Executive's plan, he declared, in that it would permit creation of a new Supreme Court overnight. "There is always danger of a President having too much power over the Constitution," he added.

Norris was one of five Senators with whom President Roosevelt discussed the court situation in the course of the day. The others, all Democrats, were Wagner, New York; Dieterich, Illinois; Pittman, Nevada, and McAdoo, California.

Senator Norris said he had been

Roosevelt Stand Reports Conflict

By Robert C. Albright.

Delay of any direct showdown on the President's plan to enlarge the Supreme Court, to provide time for expected farm and labor support and even possible Supreme Court retirements, was forecast yesterday in responsible Capitol quarters.

Plans for speedy committee action on the plan were apparently abandoned, in favor of an early Senate vote on the bill for full pay voluntary retirement of Supreme Court justices at 70, which passed the House Wednesday, and has Presidential indorsement.

In the face of this strategy, officials close to the President made plain there has been no talk of compromise at the White House—that the President offered his plan only after deliberate study and full realization that it would meet with strong opposition.

Conflicting Impressions.

Senators, who continued to be called to the White House, received a conflicting impression, it was learned. Some who conferred with the President on Wednesday, and others calling yesterday, left the White House with a feeling Mr. Roosevelt has not completely closed the door to some other solution.

Letters and telegrams overwhelmingly opposed to a Supreme Court make-over poured into the Capitol, but friends of the plan insisted vocal farm and labor support, which they hope will counteract the early adverse reaction, has yet to be heard from.

White House attaches said messages received there ran 2 to 1 favorable to the plan.

Behind the move for Senate passage of the Supreme Court retirement bill was the frequently expressed suggestion that two or three possible retirements from the bench following its passage might delay indefinitely action on the more drastic White House plan, and even hold it up for the session.

Meeting Canceled.

One indication that a "go slow" signal has been flashed came in cancelation of a scheduled meeting of the House Judiciary Committee meeting on the judicial reorganization plan. Chairman Hatton Sumners said the committee will not meet until Tuesday. The Senate Judiciary Committee will hold its regular meeting Monday.

"The visibility is not good; the barometer is low and wind is not in the right direction, so we decided not to take off today," said Sumners. "Perhaps the atmosphere will clear by next Tuesday."

Wednesday, at the request of the White House, Sumners called off slated House action on an old committee bill to speed Justice Department intervention in Constitutional litigation, with the right of direct appeal to the Supreme Court on adverse decisions. It was said the President wanted to make certain the bill is in line with his recommended procedural reforms.

Harrison Takes Stand.

A modest indorsement of the "general idea" of the President's more sweeping Supreme Court proposals meantime came from Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, Administration stalwart and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. Harrison previously had declined to commit himself.

Senator Harrison qualified his approval by saying he would hate to see an increase in the court to 15 justices, and still hoped it would be possible to hold it to nine. But he said a plan such as that proposed by the President might have to be put into effect to bring about retirement of justices.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, who inaugurated the movement to "split" the President's bill into two parts, with the Supreme Court increase segregated from other judicial reforms, said he will press his motion only when the President's plan is called up in the Senate Judiciary committee. There is reason to believe it may not be on Monday.

Van Nuys, strongly antagonistic to a six-judge increase in the court, predicted his motion will win by an overwhelming majority in the committee. One private poll indicated

Miss Earhart to Fly Around World's Center In 27,000-Mile Test of Human Stamina in Air

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 11.—Amelia Earhart Putnam, conqueror of both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, announced tonight a new air venture —an east-to-west globe girdling flight "as close to the equator as I can make it."

She said the 27,000-mile flight would be started, after more than a year of planning, from Oakland, Calif., some time in March. Capt. Harry Manning, hero of many ocean rescues, will accompany the woman pilot on a part of the flight as navigator.

"I don't know exactly when we will start," Mrs. Putnam said after a "warm-up" flight here from St. Louis in her latest plane, a multi-engined monoplane purchased by the Purdue Research Foundation of Purdue University.

"But it won't be before the weather and the plane are both right. I've wanted to make this flight more than anything else in the world, but I am not going to be stampeded into starting it."

From Oakland the tousle-haired aviatrix and her sea-car navigator plan to fly direct to Honolulu, a water hop of 2,400 miles.

The projected route, she said, continues from Honolulu across the Pacific 2,550 miles to Howland Island, a tiny speck in the ocean, where Department of Commerce workers are already preparing a landing site for this and other flights.

From Howland the route continues eastward to Lae, New Guinea, then on to Darwin, Australia, and northwestward over the regular England-Australia air route. The exact path across Africa has not been selected, Mrs. Putnam said, but from Dakar she plans to fly westward across the south Atlantic to Natal, Brazil.

The last leg of the trip "if I get that far," she said, will be from Natal to Oakland, by way of either Miami or Mexico.

The world circling flight has no commercial sponsor, Amelia declared, and her one great interest is to "find out more about the reactions of human beings in flight."

"I want to know what food is best for pilots and passengers," she said. "To find out what happens to the human after hours and hours of flight, and why it happens."

Supreme Court Bill Delayed to Rally Support

only two or three committee members will oppose the Van Nuys division of the bill.

The Indianan said he had received 2,000 letters and telegrams, none of them similarly worded, and that less than 1 per cent of them favored the President's plan.

Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, said he had received approximately 500 letters, and they were opposed by a ratio of 50 to 1 to enlarging the court. Tydings has never committed himself for or against the plan. Another Senator on the "noncommittal" list said he had received hundreds of letters, most of them congratulating him on a stand "against" the plan he has not taken.

The Administration was reported to be looking for helpful support from farm and labor interests. It appeared certain no early action will be asked until these groups are fully heard from.

Green Supports Plan.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, already has indorsed the plan, and the support of John L. Lewis, and his C. I. O., now freed from automobile strike negotiations, is taken for granted.

Several farm groups critical of Supreme Court AAA invalidation, already have indorsed the plan. In this connection, W. H. Settle, of Indiana, chairman of the Roosevelt agriculture committee which in the last campaign functioned in 16 midwestern and Southern States, conferred with the President yesterday. He said he approved the proposed court change.

Despite the impression of White House visitors that Mr. Roosevelt is willing to consider a better plan if one is offered, the President was represented yesterday as opposed to any compromise, or even such changes as an increase in the retirement age to 75, proposed by Senate Majority Leader Robinson.

It was said the President is against the Constitutional amendment method, feeling that as the child labor amendment has not been approved in 20 years, the amendment route would involve prolonged delay. He was further represented as feeling the Supreme Court retirement bill passed by the House in itself would not suffice, although he favors its passage.

Senator Andrews, (Democrat), of Florida, proposed in a bill justices be permitted to retire at full pay on reaching 72, instead of 70 specified in the House measure. Another change under the Andrews measure would not permit justices to be called back to service in the circuits after retirement.

Backed by Harlan.

The President's plan was both assailed and defended in the House yesterday. Representative Byron B. Harlan (Democrat), of Ohio, declared the President's proposal was to "unpack instead of pack the Supreme Court."

"Shall he (the President) sit quietly by and watch one branch of the Government exercise an absolute veto over another branch, when he knows that the vetoed branch is trying to carry out the desires of the people, and the vetoing branch is expressing the ideals of an age that has passed?" said Harlan.

He was answered by Representative Noah M. Mason (Republican), Illinois, a new member, who said:

"If we pass this tailor-made bill we are announcing to the world that Congress is subservient to the President and will be forcing the court to put its head in the yoke of an avenger."

'Who IS the Boss,' Veterans Ask in Oklahoma Town

Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 11 (AP).—The American Legion demanded tonight that the city council decide which of two contenders is the city manager, saying the controversy is making Muskogee "the laughing stock of the State."

The two claimants to the office, meanwhile, matched coins for a soft drink.

W. H. Pritchett, who was ousted by an 8-to-7 vote of the council, but refused to quit, lost the flip and paid for the drink. His opponent is Phifer B. Bostic, appointed to succeed him.

Pritchett contends nine votes are necessary to oust him.

Civic organizations began to fret as the impasse passed its third day.

New Faces in Congress

Dante's Devils Mock Shafer—4 Predecessors Die in Office

REPRESENTATIVE PAUL SHAFER.

Representative From Battle Creek, Mich., Entered Politics as Result of 'Crusade' by Newspaper He Edited.

By Liam Lenihan.

Add to the mortality rate of Republican Congressmen the jinx of premature death and you have a vision of Dantesque devils mocking at Paul W. Shafer's political future.

Yet one look at the Representative from Battle Creek, Mich., is enough to convince even the superstitious that he is unworried by precedent.

Tall and heavy-set, Shafer, whose five immediate predecessors, save one, died in office, is the picture of robust good health and seems to possess a shrewd political instinct.

Newspaper Editor.

A newspaper editor by profession, and a "muckraker" to boot, Congressman Shafer was born in Three Rivers, Mich., April 27, 1893.

"I started out to be a newspaper artist" he said yesterday. "But somehow I got sidetracked into a journalistic career."

Dabbling in newspaper work during school days, Shafer chased fires for the Daily Hustler in Three Rivers, and became leg man at Kalamazoo, where he attended Normal High, for the Telegraph Press.

From then on until he became editor of a leading paper in Battle Creek Shafer pursued the zig-zagging career of the orthodox newsman. He covered such spectacular stories as the Chicago race riots of 1919, and the Carl Wanderer case, in addition to numerous murder trials and "a couple of good hanging scenes."

Politics by Crusade.

It was in his capacity as editor that the future Congressman had the first urgings to embark on a political career.

"Our paper was crusading against a local municipal justice," he said. "We had to make good our threat to oust him so I decided to oppose him and was elected."

Re-elected to the same post in 1933, Shafer became a candidate for Congress in 1935 but decided to withdraw. That was a special election.

Last year he nosed out a field of four, including one Townsend-endorsed candidate, in a bitterly fought primary. In the November election he defeated his Democratic opponent by almost 5,000 votes even though President Roosevelt carried the district by more than 12,000.

Liberal Republican.

Shafer, who describes himself as "a liberal Republican," stated that his philosophy is "to give service and not to criticise." He said he is a believer in "common sense legislation" and he barred pre-election vituperative from his barnstorming addresses.

Foe of the red rider, because "it does more than anything to foster comunism," Shafer predicts the Michigan Legislature will shortly repeal that civil liberties infringement from the statute books.

Outside of his work on the Hill, where his motto is "Serve your District," Shafer is interested in the welfare of blind people and the care of crippled children. His lighter moments are spent with his first love—the draughting board and crayon—and he admitted sketching caricatures of friends and fellow politicians.

arbitrary, but vindictive in its operation and administration." He said:

"If this act is applicable to us, and it can be shown that we, a corporation engaged strictly in the manufacture of clothing in Richmond, are operating in interstate commerce, then the act will be even more applicable to department stores, from Woodward & Lothrop here to Macy's in New York."

"It would be applicable to such concerns as Sears-Roebuck and Montgomery Ward and Marshall Field—corporations which ship by parcel post over railroads packages in the original character in which they came into the places of business.

"It would apply to a hot-dog stand where a man sells a frankfurter on a bun, covered with mustard, to a traveler going from one State to another.

"The absurdity of the thing demonstrates its inapplicability * * *

"The act attacks the very foundation of the employer-employe relation. It's a forced marriage of the employer to the employe by a shotgun ceremony with the board standing over us."

Reed Closely Examined.

Justices Sutherland and McReynolds, by their questions, have indicated serious doubt of Constitutionality of the act, according to students of the Court. Sutherland yesterday examined Solicitor General Stanley Reed very closely when the latter argued Congress' power to regulate conditions resulting in labor disturbances when those conditions directly affect the flow of interstate commerce.

He distinguished between this Congressional power and actual regulation of hours and wages, which the Supreme Court has ruled lies beyond Congressional regulatory authority.

Sutherland said:

"What is the primary effect of a steel mill strike? Does it not curtail production—primarily?"

Reed admitted that this is one of its effects. Sutherland then made this distinction:

"A strike first affects production, therefore, and then secondarily the flow of commerce, through the curtailment of production." The Court many times has held that Congress cannot control conditions affecting interstate commerce secondarily, or indirectly.

Reed, however, answered that the effect on commerce is "instantaneous."

"Employe Has Rights."

Charles Fahy, counsel for the National Labor Relations Board, told the court:

"This act does not forbid the employer to discharge an employe for cause. He is forbidden only to discharge him for labor-relations activities.

"The Congress has found that the employe, in this country, also has rights—the rights of organization and of free selection of representatives in collective bargaining with which to meet the overwhelming material forces aligned on the side of the employer."

However, Earl Reed, counsel for the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., said:

"If these men, the employes of this company, can be discharged solely for reasons satisfactory to the National Labor Relations Board, then all freedom of contract and all employer-control of labor is gone."

Civil Service Cited.

"This would raise every worker in the country to a civil service status."

Throughout the afternoon, as attorneys on both sides found that their contentions had been covered generally in arguments of previous days, the appearances shortened in length, and the hearings on the act's constitutionality, originally scheduled for 18 hours of argument, were finished in less than 14 for the week.

"It is our contention that the act should apply only to those industries in which a substantial part of their business is the receiving or shipping of goods in interstate commerce. Obviously it will not apply to every one."

Supreme Court Plan Perilous, Asserts Norris

Senator Says Other Ways Can End War on New Deal Measure.

"in favor of making the court proposition an issue in the last campaign," and added he had no doubt as to what the outcome would have been. The President has been criticized in some circles because he did not reveal his court plan during the campaign. The President said nothing in the campaign on possible methods of breaking the impasse between the Administration and the Supreme Court.

It was learned previously at the White House President Roosevelt had held his first conference with Attorney General Cummings on his reform project within a week after the election, when he returned to Washington from Hyde Park.

Norris agreed with the President that amending the Constitution is too slow a process to be of quick relief in the present impasse between the New Deal and the Supreme Court. But he still favors amendments which he intends to press, regardless of the fate of the President's plan, he said.

Two of the amendments he suggested would limit tenure of all Federal judges, and enable Congress to enact an invalidated measure by passing it again after the Supreme Court's adverse ruling by a two-thirds vote, just as can be done in the case of a measure vetoed by the President.

Meanwhile, he would enact legislation requiring more than a mere majority of the Supreme Court be required to declare a law unconstitutional. He pointed to the Nebraska provision that five of seven judges must vote against an act of the legislature in order to invalidate it, and he insisted that "out there our liberties have not been taken from us."

Increasing the size of the court would be a dangerous precedent, he held, because "other Congresses might increase it further, until finally it would be bigger than Congress and we would have to build a new temple for it."

"The new court might be as bad as this one," he said.

He declared it was natural a President, in appointing Supreme Court justices, would want to appoint those who agreed with him on theories of government.

Court Reform Plan Welcomed By Dr. Walsh

Georgetown U. Executive Declares Problem Now Faced by Citizens.

President Roosevelt's proposal for remaking the Supreme Court was welcomed yesterday by Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University as "a turn of events which brings this vital issue before individual citizen and makes him conscious of the tremendous possibilities attaching to the final decision."

He added: "No single individual but the people should resolve this controversy."

"The Constitution and the Supreme Court" was selected by Dr. Walsh last spring for his annual series of public lectures in Memorial Continental Hall. A few weeks ago before the President sent his court re-organization message to Congress, the Georgetown educator in announcing the topic of his lecture series, warned then that "numerous proposals are being drafted in the form either of amendments to the Constitution or of specific statutory legislation by Congress, all designed to limit or drastically define the powers of the court regarding acts of Congress.

Discussing the court issue yesterday, Dr. Walsh said: By his dramatic announcement a week ago, the President has made this subject the most important problem now facing the american people. In a certain sense this idea should be welcomed at this time, as nothing is more deadening to progress than a sense of uncertainty. As the issue is far more important than the interest of any one political party, the time has come to face it in the exclusive light of the common welfare.

"The results of much reading in this field have convinced me that the problem is by no means a new one. Hitherto, the fundamental steadiness of the American people has prevented any dangerous adventure with respect to an independent judiciary. But many thoughtful men are now of the opinion that the time has come for a dangerous adventure in order to forestall more dangerous possibilities. Another large body of public opinion holds the exact opposite.

"Personally, I welcome a turn of events which brings this vital issue before every individual citizen, and makes him conscious of the tremendous possibilities attaching to the final decision. No single individual but the people should resolve this controversy.

"I consider the present moment as momentous as the period of high debate preceeding the Civil War."

Supreme Court Faces Adjournment in April Through Insufficiency of Cases to Be Argued

ing the last 5 years there has been no congestion in the dockets of that tribunal. Convincing evidence that there is no congestion now, is the probability that the court within two months will run out of cases ready to be argued.

There will be nothing new about this if it should happen as expected. It has occurred one or more times in each term of the Supreme Court during the last five years. Thus on Thursday, April 9 last year, the court was forced to recess shortly after starting its session that day when it had heard the last of the cases ready for argument.

The court was forced to recess in the middle of weeks assigned for hearing argument of cases three times during the 1931-32 term; twice in the 1932-33 term; twice in the 1933-34 term and three times in the 1934-35 term.

One of the adjournments in the latter term came on March 7, 1935. Had it not been for the death of former Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes on the day previous, the forced recess would have come that day. But out of respect to the memory of the great Supreme Court justice, no session of court was held on March 6.

There has been no docket congestion in the Supreme Court since the beginning of the October, 1932, term. In that term the court had heard and disposed of every case on its docket ready for argument before it adjourned for its summer vacation at the beginning of June, 1933. In addition it had heard every case of which it had taken jurisdiction before March 4, 1933. Of the 110 cases remaining on its docket when it adjourned, only 13 reached the court docket prior to the end of April.

It was this accomplishment by the court in the 1932-33 term which caused Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School, writing in the December, 1933, Harvard Law Review to point out that "for the first time since the early years of its institution, the court is hearing and disposing of all litigation brought before it without delay and without sacrifice of any of the guarantees of ample argument and due deliberation which the effective exercise of its functions demands."

"In so doing," Prof. Frankfurter continued, "it sets a standard for State courts of last resort throughout the country. The significance of such a performance far transcends the boon to litigants of a prompt settlement of disputes. For expedition in decision is as much a condition as an end of justice. . . .

"The court's success in causing decision to catch up with litigation is the more impressive because of the steady increase throughout the decade in the number of cases coming before it. . . .

"The perennial problem of delimiting the court's jurisdiction so as neither to impair its essential functions nor to defeat its capacity for deliberation by increasing its numbers for the time being has come to rest. . . .

"Never before, it may be ventured without invidiousness, have the standards of the Supreme Court in the conduct of its business been higher than since the judicial act of 1925 . . . The present state of the court's business thus points to no urgent readjustment in the jurisdictional and procedural mechanisms by which it functions."

Of particular significance in the current controversy over naming new judges to the Supreme Court is this declaration of Prof. Frankfurter in December, 1933 that the high tribunal had become so free of congestion as to make unnecessary any further restrictions on the court's jurisdiction or any increase in its members to handle the work imposed on it.

It is significant because since Prof. Frankfurter made that statement the Supreme Court steadily has improved the condition of its docket and has speeded up its disposition of cases—a fact which the Harvard law professor has testified to on subsequent occasions in the Harvard Law Review and as recently as November 1935.

Thus if no reason existed in the fall of 1933 to make any change in the size or jurisdiction of the court on the score of congestion, less reason on that score exists today.

His words are doubly significant because of the status of Prof. Frankfurter in relationship to the Roosevelt Administration. He is not a hostile or partisan witness against the Administration or the New Deal. He long has been known as a leading liberal and since 1933 has been a close confidant and adviser to President Roosevelt. Indeed, in some quarters he has erroneously been credited with being one of the sponsors of the President's plan to revamp the Federal Judiciary. He has been mentioned as one of the men the President may name to the Supreme Court if he has a chance to make any appointments to that tribunal.

Expert on Court.

Furthermore, when discussing the business of the Supreme Court, Prof. Frankfurter speaks with the voice of authority. For more than ten years he has made work of court a subject of special inquiry and study. Prof. Frankfurter's interest in the work of the Supreme Court grew out of a desire to ascertain the 1925 judiciary act—increasing the jurisdictional discretion of the court in determining the cases it will hear—would be successful in rescuing it from the congestion which throttled it in that and previous years.

In 1927, in collaboration with James M. Landis, who soon will resign as SEC chairman to become dean of the Harvard Law School, Prof. Frankfurter wrote a book titled "The Business of the Supreme Court." They held that passage of the 1925 judiciary act "marks a new chapter in the history of the Federal judiciary" and they described the 100-year effort—including many proposals for increasing the number of justices—to free the Supreme Court from congestion.

They contended the 1925 Judiciary act had cut the Supreme Court's jurisdiction "to the bone" and that further relief, if needed, would have to be found in another direction. They indicated they were not optimistic that the 1925 Judiciary act had solved the Supreme Court's problem. Consequently they pursued the subject, after publication of their book.

Prof. Frankfurter, assisted by Chairman Landis until the latter came to Washington and after that by Henry M. Hart, jr., each fall, beginning in 1928 and excepting last fall, has analyzed and reviewed the work of each previous term of the Supreme Court in a Harvard Law Review article captioned: "The Business of the Supreme Court."

Conclusion in 1933.

Frankfurter's conclusion, despite earlier doubts, despite the 1925 Judiciary act had provided the means for the Supreme Court to disentangle itself from congestion, came in the fall of 1933, on the basis of the previous term of the high tribunal. In his two succeeding articles Phof. Frankfurter has given no indication he has changed his conclusion, but on the contrary, has lauded the manner in which the Supreme Court has shown improvement.

For instance, he reported the court in the 1933-34 term "for the fourth successive year was able to keep abreast of its docket" and he added that "once again every case ready for argument was argued, and every argued case was decided before adjournment." He pointed out that during that term the court had cleared from its docket 1,021 cases or 115 more cases than at any previous term in the court's history.

When that term of court adjourned—in June of 1934—it had on its docket only 92 pending cases, which were 18 less than in the previous year, and the lowest number of pending cases in the modern history of the court. Note was made of the fact that the court had handed down a full opinion deciding one case within five weeks from the date that probable jurisdiction was noted.

"Inevitably the denial of certiorari or the summary dismissal of an appeal as unsubstantial, reflects, however, unconsciously, the exigencies of the docket," he reported at that time. "But there is no reason to suppose that the court pursues such opportunism as a deliberate policy."

And in the November, 1935, Harvard Law Review, speaking of the 1934-35 term of court, Prof. Frankfurter, as reported in The Washington Post last Sunday, asserted "a tradition of prompt disposition of business, for which Mr. Chief Justice Taft did so much to lay the foundations, appears to have become fixed under his successor (Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes)."

He reported that again the court had "kept abreast of its docket" and asserted that "especially gratifying is it that a tribunal with the Supreme Court's scope of jurisdiction should do so with increasing attention to those details of administration which are the safeguards against undue pressure and inadequate deliberation."

Pressure Is Lacking.

Prof Frankfurter held that "no excessive pressure was apparent" on the Supreme Court in keeping up with its work in the 1934-35 term, adding that "during three of the 16 weeks of session (given over to argument)—the last time at the closing one—the court recessed in the middle of the week for want of cases on the day calendar ready for argument."

The manner in which the Supreme Court has worked its way out of congestion since the passage of the 1925 Judiciary act is shown by the following table of cases pending on its docket at the end of each term for the years indicated:

1925	283
1927	175
1928	125
1929	173
1930	123
1931	120
1932	110

At the end of the 1927 term Prof. Frankfurter reported that for the first time in 100 years the court had "reached for argument on the regular calendar cases docketed during the term." A year later he reported that "in the prompt dispatch of criminal appeals the Supreme Court continues to set an example to the appellate courts of the country; and cases on its general docket are reached for argument more speedily than they have been for decades." In November, 1930, he reported that "at the last term the court disposed of every case that was ripe for decision" and that "for the first time in many years no case that had been submitted was allowed to go over."

In December, 1931, he reported that "at the last term, the court was able to keep abreast of its docket, although the volume of its business had increased." He explained that "the total number of cases docketed was greater, more cases were disposed of and fewer cases have been carried over to the present term than at any time in recent history." He reported that the court before adjourning had "heard all cases that were ready for argument up to May 4, 1931."

"Instead of counsel pressing the court to hear cases," Prof. Frankfurter wrote, "the pressure is from the court upon counsel to accelerate the pace in bringing cases to argument."

In November, 1932, the Harvard law professor reported that again the court had kept "abreast of its docket" and that "despatch of business is not a final test of judicial efficiency, but prompt disposition of litigation by the Supreme Court does not appear to involve sacrifice of other desiderata for the sound administration of justice."

It was the next year that he pronounced the court current with its work, calling this "a real accomplishment—how great appears by contrast with the accumulation of cases which in the past have clogged the docket of the court." It was then that he held no other remedy for accelerating the work of the court was needed.

The personnel of the Supreme Court has remained unchanged since Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo was named to that bench on February 15, 1932.

Court Shakeup, Lincoln Views Held to Agree

Emanci Pastor Compared With Roosevelt by Gov. Earle.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11.—Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania contended tonight that if Abraham Lincoln were President now he would seek reorganization of the United States Supreme Court.

In an address prepared for delivery before the Mid-Day Luncheon Club on the eve of the 128th anniversary of Lincoln's birth, he said:

"On July 7, 1858, Lincoln warned citizens of Springfield that 'to accept for the Supreme Court would—and for the Supreme Court would—and cept supinely the power claimed I quote—'reduce us to the despotism of an oligracy.'"

The Governor added, "In that speech Lincoln was quoting from a letter in which Jefferson had written:

"'To consider the judges as the ultimate arbiters of all constitutional questions is a dangerous doctrine indeed, and one which places us under the despotism of an oligarchy.'"

Landon to Give Views.

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—In the manuscript of a speech, the titular head of the Republican Party, Alfred M. Landon, brought to New York today his views upon President Roosevelt's Supreme Court proposals.

Auto Strikers Leave Plants Amid Cheers

Flint Goes Wild as Tired Workers Evacuate Two Factories.

where he lay ill with a severe cold, ended eight days and nights of meetings which Murphy arranged at "the wish of the President."

Roosevelt Telegram.

And after three leaders of the opposing sides affixed their signatures to the settlement today, President Roosevelt telegraphed to Murphy "The thanks of the Nation" for "a high public service nobly performed."

Less than 500 words were required to state the peace terms that halted a Nation-wide industrial strife in automobile plants, and made possible the resumption of operations in General Motors units which William S. Knudsen, executive vice president, predicted would reach a speed of 225,000 cars and trucks in March.

The corporation agreed:

To recognize the U. A. W. A. as collective bargaining agency for its members.

To reopen as soon as possible all its plants on strike or otherwise idle.

To exercise no discrimination or prejudice against any employe because of his activity in the union or the strike.

To consent to dismissal of injunction proceedings against the union, its officers and members, and to discontinue contempt actions instituted under these injunctions.

The union pledged:

To "forthwith terminate" the strike and evacuate all striker-held plants.

To exhaust possibility of negotiation of grievances before calling any strike, during the collective bargaining agreement contemplated in further conferences, and not to solicit members on company premises or to coerce or intimidate employes.

To refrain from calling strikes or interfering with production pending the further negotiations.

Both corporation and union agreed to bargain collectively, starting February 16, on the union demands listed on January 4 by Homer Martin, union presidentfi in a letter to Knudsen.

Demands Still Pend.

Remaining for negotiations in the conferences which will start next Tuesday in the General Motors Building here are such union demands as: Abolition of piece-work systems of pay, a 30-hour week, 6-hour day, and pay and a half for overtime; a "minimum rate of pay commensurate with an American standard of living;" seniority rights and agreement on speed of production between the management and a union shop committee.

The settlement lifted the tension from the "strike capital," Flint, where nearly a fourth of the city's 125,000 population is employed in General Motors plants. Most of these lost their jobs during the strike. After two riots in which 39 persons were injured, Natoinal Guardsmen took over the rigid patrol of an 80-acre area surrounding the Chevrolet Motor Co. plants. Sit-down strikers in the Chevrolet motor assembly department, plant No. 1, have held their posts since a week ago Monday.

Both General Motors and union leaders expressed satisfaction at the agreement. Alfred P. Sloan, jr., corporation president, who once participated briefly in conversations with Secretary Perkins at Washington in a strike conciliation effort, said it "is in complete support with the principles upon which General Motors has stood since the beginning of this unfortunate controversy."

"Another Milestone."

Lewis, C. I. O. head and strike generalissimo who also talked with Secretary Perkins before joining Murphy's conference here, termed it "another milestone on labor's march." Wyndham Mortimer, first vice president, who was a signer for the union, said, "it provides for better working conditions and greater harmony which we hope will continue for many years."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, which suspended C. I. O. unions last year because of their insistence on organizing labor by industries, and telegraphed Murphy recently expressing hope that rights of craft unionists would be preserved, said Lewis "surrendered." He expressed regret that the U. A. W. A. failed to obtain "recognition of the closed shop principle."

General Motors, in announcing the $25,000,000 wage increase today, said the "corporation's average wage rate giving weight to the above increase will be approximately 25 per cent in excess of the highest prevailing in the pre-depression period."

Case Strike Settled.

Racine, Wis., Feb. 11 (AP).—The 108-day-old labor dispute at the J. I. Case Co.'s three plants here ended today when members of the United Automobile Workers of America ratified a compromise plan of wage demands.

The first of 1,800 production workers thrown into idleness when picketing forced the closing of the farm machinery manufacturing plants last October, will return to work tomorrow morning, H. H. Biggert, vice president in charge of production, said.

The wage demand compromise, as announced by Tom Faucett, a member of the union bargaining committee, calls for a guarantee of a 5 per cent general increase by April 15, with further wages questions to be discussed with the committee in the interim.

Child Labor Amendment Ratified in New Mexico

Santa Fe, N. Mex., Feb. 11 (U.P.).—New Mexico became the twenty-seventh State to ratify the child labor amendment to the Federal Constitution late today when the Senate passed the resolution by a 13-to-11 vote after a bitter fight by opposition forces. Last week the House passed the resolution 27 to 17.

New Mexico's ratification of the measure makes it necessary for nine more States to ratify the amendment before it becomes a part of the Federal Constitution.

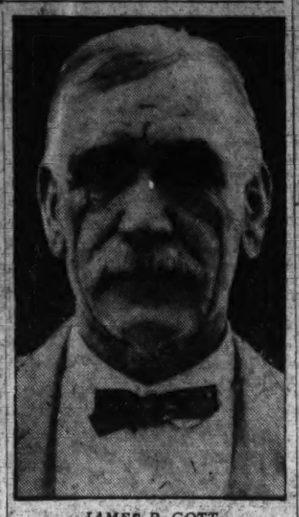
20 Prisoners Refuse to Flee; Help Fatally Stricken Guard

James Gott Found Dead When Surgeon Arrives.



JAMES R. GOTT.

Some 20 prisoners waiting to be shipped down the river to Occoquan Workhouse kept themselves in custody yesterday when their guard was taken fatally ill in the dining room of the waterfront "bull pen" at Ninth and Water streets southwest.

James P. Gott, 76-year-old guard, was stricken suddenly at 7 a. m., about an hour before he was to go off duty. Instead of seizing the chance to break for freedom, the men, according to Harbor Precinct police, did what they could to aid the helpless officer. One of them telephone for an ambulance.

Gott was pronounced dead 15 minutes later by an Emergency Hospital ambulance surgeon.

A resident of Rockville, Mr. Gott had been an Occoquan Wharf guard about eight years. He was a lifetime resident of Montgomery County and at one time served as sheriff. He had been in good health up to the time he collapsed on duty yesterday.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the home, with burial in Beallsville, Md.

Survivors are the widow, Mrs. L. Pearl Gott; four children, who live in Montgomery County; four other children by a previous marriage; two brothers, a sister and a stepdaughter living in Washington, and a brother, resident in Annapolis.

Text of Strike Agreement

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 11.—The text of the agreement between the United Automobile Workers Union and General Motors Corporation that ended the 44-day automotive strike follows:

Agreement entered into on this 11th day of February, 1937, between the General Motors Corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "Corporation"), and the International Union, United Automobile Workers of America (hereinafter referred to as the "union"):

1. The Corporation hereby recognizes the Union as the collective bargaining agency for those employes of the Corporation who are members of the Union. The Corporation recognizes and will not interfere with the right of its employes to be members of the Union. There shall be no discrimination, interference, restraint or coercion by the Corporation or any of its agents against any employes because of membership in the Union.

2. The Corporation and the Union agree to commence collective bargaining negotiations on February 16, with regard to the issues specified in the letter of January 4, 1937, from the Union to the Corporation, for the purpose of entering into a collective bargaining agreement, or agreements, covering such issues, looking to a final and complete settlement of all matters in dispute.

3. The Union agrees to forthwith terminate the present strike against the Corporation and to evacuate all plants now occupied by strikers.

4. The corporation agrees that all of its plants, which are on strike or otherwise idle shall resume operations as rapidly as possible.

5. It is understood that all employes now on strike or otherwise idle will return to their usual work when called and that no discrimination shall be made or prejudices exercised by the corporation against any employe because of his former affiliation with, or activities in, the union or the present strike.

6. The union agrees that pending the negotiations referred to in paragraph 2, there shall be no strikes called or any other interruption to or interference with production, by the union or its members.

7. During the existence of the collective bargaining agreement contemplated pursuant to paragraph 2, all opportunities to achieve a satisfactory settlement of any grievance or the enforcement of any demands by negotiations shall be exhausted before there shall be any strikes or other interruption to, or interference with production by the union or its members. There shall be no attempt to intimidate or coerce any employes by the union and there shall not be any solicitation or signing up of members by the union on the premises of the company. This is not to preclude individual discussion.

8. After the evacuation of its plants, and the termination of the strike, the corporation agrees to consent to the entry of orders, dismissing the injunction proceedings which have been started by the corporation against the union, or any of its members, or officers or any of its locals, including these pendings in Flint, Mich., and Cleveland, Ohio, and subject to the approval of the court to discontinue all contempt proceedings which it has instituted thereunder.

Nation Hears Murphy Speak On Auto Strike

"How did it feel," a reporter asked him, "to be between an immovable object and an irresistible force?"

"Fascinating," Murphy answered.

With his day's work done, praised by union and General Motors negotiators alike and thanked "on behalf of the Nation" by President Roosevelt, Murphy went to his hotel apartment to sleep again—and he left no call.

Settlement of one of the greatest industrial disputes of these times was the climax of a career which carried Murphy in 40 years from neighborhood scraps with other urchins at Harbor Beacon, Mich., on the shore of Lake Huron, to a high place in national politics.

His governorship followed a campaign conducted at the request of President Roosevelt, who recalled him from his post as High Commissioner to the Philippines to win Michigan for the New Deal.

In the days before 1933 the one-time amateur boxer and track man caught the attention of the then Gov. Roosevelt of New York when he won the mayoralty of Detroit over bitter opposition and drove through a "revolutionary" program of relief for depression victims.

His attitude on labor conflicts was evident during his term as mayor when he refused to allow city police to be used in breaking picket lines at strike-closed body plants.

India's Independence Sought by Extremists

Bombay, Feb. 11 (AP).—India's extremist Congress Party, demanding absolute independence from Great Britain, and victorious in two provincial elections, is waging a vigorous campaign to carry nine others in this month's elections.

Veteran political observers believed the party had an excellent chance of winning control of half the new provincial legislature. Earlier some had believed lack of a majority by any party would make necessary coalition governments.

Senate Is Told General Motors Halted Spying

Pinkerton Man Testifies Agents Were Dropped as Inquiry Opened.

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators heard testimony yesterday that General Motors Corporation has discontinued the industrial espionage services of the Pinkerton Detective Agency as an indirect result of the Senate civil liberties inquiry.

General Motors, largest industrial client of Pinkerton, dropped the service 11 days ago.

Robert Dudley, Pinkerton vice president, told the Civil Liberties Committee that General Motors gave no reason for the termination, but it was because Pinkerton had stopped making written reports.

The Pinkerton Agency ceased submitting written reports on labor matters to any of its clients after it had been subpenaed in the investigation.

Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, produced charts showing Generals Motors had paid Pinkerton $419,850 between January 1, 1934, and July 31, 1936.

La Follette detected a $40,000 discrepancy between the 1935 payments as submitted by the committee investigators and the figure filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission by the company. The committee compilation showed General Motors had paid $203,333 in 1935, as against the SEC figure of $167,586.

Earlier, the committee had drawn from a Pinkerton official a hesitant story of how he had promised to conceal an operative's identity during the investigation.

Lawrence Pugmire, assistant superintendent of Pinkerton's Detroit office, nervously admitted conferring with the man, also under subpena by the committee, in a Washington hotel room a "couple of days ago."

"I told him if it was within my power he wouldn't be let down," Pugmire said. He explained he meant he would not reveal the man's identity.

Also present in the hotel room, Pugmire said, was Robert Mason, another assistant in the Detroit office.

When the witness hesitated in recounting the story of the meeting, La Follette leaned forward and said:

"Come clean, Pugmire."

Pugmire said he had paid this operative $65 since January 31, when his services as an investigator were terminated by the General Motors discontinuance.

Artists to Compete For Interior Job

A national competition, for which all American artists are eligible, to decorate the auditorium of the new Interior Building with a three-section mural or triptych, has been announced by the Treasury Department.

Submitted designs will be judged by the Treasury's painting and sculpture division, which is supervising the competition; Waddy Wood, architect of the new home of the Interior Department; William Zimmerman, representing Secretary Harold L. Ickes; Eugene Savage, Alexander Brook and Herman More, New York painters, and Daniel Catton Rich, of the Art Institute of Chicago.

April 30 is the deadline for submission of sketches. The artist selected for the project will receive $5,500. The mural will go at the back of the auditorium stage and will cover 265 square feet. Secretary Ickes' approval of the winning design will be necessary before the contract is awarded.

Gov. Murphy 'Dead-Tired' But Jubilant

'Man Who Settled Strike' Has Been Executive for but 42 Days.

By the United Press.

Detroit, Feb. 11.—Frank Murphy, credited on all sides with settlement of the General Motors strike, ended his first 42 days as Governor of Michigan tonight dead-tired but happy over what he considered his greatest achievement.

A secretary roused him from sleep shortly before 5:30 p. m. so that he could go on the air and tell the Nation his version of the strike settlement.

Thousands then heard the voice which through 47 hours of hectic conferences held the tempers of tense negotiators in check nd previled in the interest of peace.

He reflected in this address a philosophy of liberal government and faith in the ability of the democratic system to formulate methods for settling modern industrial disputes.

"The peaceful way is the right way," he said, epitomizing his stand throughout the strike.

"I would have relinquished my post as Governor," he said after the settlement agreement was signed, "to prevent a fatality during the strike."

"The red-haired Governor's face was drawn, but his spirits were high.

Farm Hand Admits He Alone Kidnaped And Killed Doctor

A "full confession" has been given Federal agents by Robert Kenyon, 20-year-old Missouri farm hand, in connection with the kidnap-murder of Dr. J. C. B. Davis, the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced here yesterday.

Dr. Davis, an elderly Willow Springs, Mo., practioner, was found dead of bullet wounds eight days after he was kidnaped from his home January 26. He was found in a thicket near his home.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau, said Kenyon had confessed mailing two ransom letters to the doctor's family. One was written by the doctor himself and demanded $5,000.

The prisoner, held at Kansas City charged with murder, insisted for some time after his arrest that a man whom he called "the nighthawk" actually did the killing.

first editions of the New York Herald. Samuel Colt, a little-known inventor, was patenting the first revolver. In San Felipe the convention of Texans declared themselves independent of Mexico and ready for self-government.

Mrs. Evans received the best education possible in her day, and, in 1852, she was married to Edward Jones Evans. Her husband was a newspaperman in the days when members of the craft were known as journalists, and wrote their copy in longhand for printers who set it laboriously by hand and printed it on flat-bed presses.

Her husband worked for the old Brooklyn Times, and was a contemporary of the famous newspapermen of his day. Later he worked for Horace Greeley on the New York Tribune. So absorbed was Greeley in his work of building an empire with paper and printers' ink that he seldom met the wives of his associates, and Mrs. Evans knew him only through her husband's conversation.

During the Civil War Evans received an appointment with the Postoffice Deprtment, and so he and his young wife and their babies came to Washington. They moved to Alexandria in 1864, when the city was in the hands of the Union troops, with most of its sons fighting to the south with the Confederate armies.

In 1870 Evans bought the house in which both he and his wife have died.

The years were kind to Mrs. Evans. Her mind remained active and keen until the end. She recalled the vivid impression she received of President Lincoln. She watched Alexandria and Washington change from decade to decade, and, while she remained abreast of the times, she never forgot the Alexandria and the Washington she first saw so long ago, when she came here as a young mother.

During the World War, when she was 83, she knitted 111 pairs of socks for the soldiers in France.

In 1935 the descendants and friends of Mrs. Evans gathered to help here celebrate her 100th birthday. There was a huge cake, but not huge enough to hold 100 candles, so one large candle was substituted.

In her room in a tranquil white house on St. Asaph street Mrs. Evans made ready for the party, and announced:

"I'm going to dance the minuet."

Interested in World Affairs.

Until her final illness, Mrs. Evans remained interested in world affairs. She insisted on having members of her family read the newspapers to her. For a while she was fond of the radio. Then she gave it up.

"It makes me nervous," said she, "especially some of these modern singers."

Murphy Strike Aid Is Lauded By Roosevelt

Governor Congratulated on 'Splendid Work' in Bringing Truce.

Gratification of official Washington at the end of the General Motors automobile strike was reflected in a message by President Roosevelt yesterday to Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, who conducted the peace negotiations.

At the same time the split in organized labor's ranks was intensified by a statement from William Green, president of the American Federation, that his rival union chieftain, John L. Lewis, director of the strike, had been forced to "surrender."

President Roosevelt's message to Murphy read:

"Accept hearty congratulations upon your splendid work in connection with the automobile strike settlement.

"Not only the interests directly concerned in the dispute owe you a debt of gratitude, but the general public has reason for rejoicing that an acute situation which threatened serious disorder and dislocation has been amicably adjusted through negotiation.

"Yours has been a high public service nobly performed, for which I desire to express the thanks of the Nation."

Murphy Also Felicitated.

Secretary of Labor Perkins also congratulated Murphy and received from him a telegram of appreciation for co-operation given by the Secretary in the weeks of negotiations.

Green's statement said:

"If any one lesson has been taught, it is that in a fight of this kind the solidarity of all labor in the United States and Canada is needed."

The federation suspended the ten unions affiliated with the Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization, for "dual unionism."

Representative Mason (Democrat), of Illinois, assailed Lewis on the House floor.

"Any man who will divide the ranks of labor into two camps—hostile camps, is not a friend of labor," he said.

Lewis Surrender Seen.

John P. Frey, president of the federation's Metal Trades Department, asserted that "Lewis has surrendered on every major point."

Edward F. McGrady, assistant Secretary of Labor, issued a statement saying the country should have a better way of settling such disputes. McGrady took a prominent part in the long strike negotiations.

Meanwhile, Lewis must take up, almost at once, another major battle, this time with the bituminous coal operators, whose contract with the 400,000 members of Lewis' United Mine Workers expires at the end of next month. The union heads will open negotiations with operators in New York next week, seeking a new contract.

Economic Disarmament.

In his letter to Senator Harrison, urging extension of the powers granted the President under the trade agreements act of 1934, Secretary Hull stresses the value of the reciprocal trade pacts as an agency of that economic disarmament which seems a necessary preliminary to political stabilization. "The tide in international affairs," he says, "is definitely setting in the direction of economic peace rather than war." And he believes that the policy followed by the Administration in its negotiation of trade agreements has "contributed in no small measure to this happy and wholly beneficial trend."

Secretary Hull may overestimate the extent to which the United States can hope to influence other nations to modify exclusionist trade policies which lead to economic warfare. However, there is no doubt that a good many countries have for one reason or another lately shown an increased interest in the problems presented by that unsatisfactory distribution of basic raw materials which fosters economic autarchy.

M. Georges Bonnet, now on his way to this country to take up his duties as Ambassador, used his influence at Geneva while French minister of commerce to get the League to study the problem of raw materials. It is not without significance that he is coming here anxious to renew and extend existing trade treaties, while Dr. Henry Grady, former chief of the Trade Agreements Division of the Department of State, has recently been appointed to further the same trend at Geneva.

The endeavor to link the trade pacts to larger objectives is not only statesmanlike but tactically wise, since it offers an additional argument for an extension of the Executive's power to modify tariff rates. It is an open question whether the agreements already concluded have been directly responsible for any great expansion in our foreign trade, despite Secretary Hull's claims. Most of the pacts have been in operation too short a time to permit positive conclusions to be drawn as to their effects. Then, too, it is impossible to differentiate between the expansion due to lower duties and the gains growing out of improved business.

But whether the gains be great or small, it is a matter for national pride that we have taken a stand against exclusionist, retaliatory policies that cause trade barriers to rise higher and higher. In so doing the United States has helped to prevent further trade strangulation and thereby to create an atmosphere more conducive to the maintenance of world peace.

Underprivileged Schools.

A county lacking at least one public school built with PWA assistance must be rare. Yet the Capital of the Nation has none. Because Washington is sadly deficient in adequate classroom space, this is the more ironic.

Dr. Ballou, superintendent of schools, is now urging that the District schools receive their fair share of Federal emergency funds. WPA and NYA workers have been employed on school projects, but the former are confined to landscaping and similar secondary occupations while the latter are students employed on a part-time basis. Construction work is outside the sphere of both. The PWA, however, is dedicated to building projects and while Washington has no wish to make its schools dependent on emergency funds, beggars can scarcely be choosers.

The city's school-building program is woefully in arrears. Some of the structures marked for abandonment by the Federal commission of 1908 are still in use. A five-year plan adopted in 1924 fell through when Congress refused to make the necessary annual appropriations. Last year another unproductive effort was made to integrate what Commissioner Hazen has aptly termed the District's "piece-meal" and "hit-or-miss" school-building activities.

Until some action is taken to solve the District's budgetary problem plans for any extended renovations of the school plant must be postponed. In the meantime Dr. Ballou's proposal seems to offer a way toward some improvement of a condition which is not merely unsatisfactory, but disgraceful.

A Constructive Settlement.

The General Motors strike, settled after six weeks of bitter and costly industrial conflict, has brought one development of real social significance. The agreement provides for outright collective bargaining, to start next Tuesday, between the corporation and the union. And it is further agreed that during the term of the accord sought by these negotiations "all opportunities to achieve a satisfactory settlement of any grievance . . . shall be exhausted" before there is any recourse to aggressive labor action.

This part of the accord reached yesterday shows that both sides are determined in advance to make the scheduled collective bargaining successful. But beyond that, establishment of permanent machinery to eliminate further violent disputes is clearly envisaged. If this procedure can be peacefully extended to the automobile industry as a whole the economic waste of this strike, estimated to have cost a million dollars a day in sacrificed wages alone, will not be wholly in vain.

The C. I. O. has not gained its primary objective. It has not succeeded in forcing General Motors to accept the closed shop. The United Automobile Workers Union is recognized as the collective bargaining agency only for "those employes of the corporation who are members of the union." The company may with reason say that it was fully prepared to do this much before the strike started. But it has none the less made an important concession.

From the labor viewpoint the chief defect of the open shop is that it leaves the management free to negotiate with company unions in a way which undermines the prestige and authority of the independent union. Yesterday, by a separate pact between General Motors and Gov. Murphy, the company bound itself for six months not to bargain with any labor group other than the U. A. W. U., in plants on strike, without first obtaining the Governor's approval.

This happy formula removes the major union objection without overriding the company's valid refusal to let all matters of employment policy be taken from its control. The device of making the Governor, as representative of the public, an arbiter for problems which may arise is a token of good faith on both sides. Moreover, this formula would seem capable of constructive application in the solution of other industrial disputes.

General Motors has further shown a very conciliatory disposition in agreeing not to discriminate against any of the strikers, and in making discontinuance of all legal proceedings against the union contingent only on evacuation of the illegally-seized factories. This is in keeping with the temperate attitude the management has throughout shown on what was the most potentially dangerous aspect of the strike.

The U. A. W. U., and in particular John Lewis as the driving force behind it, would be most ill-advised to draw any false conclusions from the concessions made by the company toward those who have seized its property. The sit-down strike is a lawless demonstration, clearly containing the seed of social revolution. Its further utilization will undoubtedly be demanded by Communists and other irresponsible agitators whose objective is to stimulate class war.

If the C. I. O. is to prove worthy of the confidence which the present agreement implies it must henceforth completely repudiate such quasi-revolutionary methods. Conversely, management in other mass-production industries would do well to realize that explosive labor tactics are a natural result of repressive employer policies. Nor is it easy to limit the consequences of such explosions in advance.

Gov. Murphy emerges from this industrial conflict with added stature. Except for his tactful, energetic and always scrupulously impartial intervention Michigan—and other States—might well have seen very serious disorders resulting from the strike. It now remains for both parties to the accord to work for its successful fulfillment in the same spirit of public service the Governor has so well exemplified.

Skyline Drive Tolls.

Probably few tourists turn away from Yellowstone National Park on learning that an admission fee is charged. But it is a safe prediction that many an autoist will dodge the Skyline Drive if the plan to impose a 25-cent toll at its entrance is put into effect. The difference in attitude was explained by the chairman of the Virginia Commission on Conservation and Development when he said recently: "Where admission fees are charged in some national parks, services and accommodations are provided which are not available in the Shenandoah."

A more persuasive point against the proposed toll is the fact that the people and Legislature of Virginia, in donating $1,000,000 each to buy the land for the park, did so on the assumption, often expressed, that it would be free to all people. To restrict admission now would be to stir up an unfortunate resentment throughout the State.

The hope behind the toll plan—to put the park on a more nearly self-supporting basis—is altogether commendable. Perhaps a practice followed by New York might further that hope while still leaving the Shenandoah Park open to all. In many Empire State parks all cars are admitted without charge, fees being required only for parking. Thus, casually passing drivers have free use of the highways while those who stop to make use of the picnic grounds and similar facilities contribute to the expense of maintenance and upkeep.

Future Of The Great Plains.

Last September President Roosevelt asked Morris L. Cooke to serve as chairman of a special committee charged with preparing a long-term program for the efficient utilization of the resources of the huge Great Plains area, lying just east of the Rocky Mountains. Mr. Cooke's associates in this assignment were all experts attached to various branches of the Government service, thoroughly competent to deal with different aspects of the many-sided problem under investigation. Their completed report, now transmitted to Congress, is an admirably scientific yet exceedingly interesting document of obvious national importance.

The report offers no shallow panaceas for speedy reclamation of drought areas. After noting the extremely high proportion of farmers dependent on Federal aid in this region, the committee states that here as elsewhere "a secure and stable substitute for relief" must be found. That means transforming the Plains from a "risky adventure and a recurrent liability" into a "stable basis of economic and social profit to their inhabitants and to the whole country."

The report deals with such topics as the control and use of ranges and farm land, plans for enlarging the size of farms too small to support a family, and for developing and conserving land and water resources. The committee lists more than 50 important Federal agencies in addition to State, county, municipal and district governments, that are now responsible for these and kindred problems in some way.

It therefore recommends that a territorial agency should be set up, not to supersede existing agencies, but to assist them to integrate their efforts and work toward a common objective. Particular emphasis is placed upon the importance of voluntary cooperation by local authorities and the responsibility of individuals and communities for giving effect to practical measures. As the report states, the Federal Government and the States may guide but "in the end local attitudes, policies and actions are bound to be decisive."

Soil and water wastage, and depletion of the ranges of the Great Plains region, has progressed at such an alarmingly rapid rate that a long-run conservation program should evidently be begun "without undue delay," as President Roosevelt told Congress. This imperative task of arresting the deterioration of irreplaceable natural resources involves far-reaching changes in methods of using and cultivating the land. It also entails engineering, financial, legislative and social changes needed to give effect to the agricultural program.

The committee is fully aware of the many-sided aspects of the problems under study and the report deals briefly with a number of related issues such as the provision of capital and credit needed to finance an adjustment policy, reform of land-taxation systems, and farm tenancy. The committee is also keenly conscious that one of the major obstacles to rapid land rehabilitation is found in "deep-seated attitudes of mind," inherited assumptions as to the proper way of using the lands not admissible in a region with insufficient moisture.

Educating the inhabitants of the Plains regions to a better understanding of the conditions necessary for successful farming there is one of the most essential and one of the most difficult tasks that confronts the conservationists. The committee not only realizes that fact but has made an important contribution to this education by making public its own carefully weighed opinions.

When Silence Is Golden.

Emily Post is no slack when it comes to knowing which fork to use and why. But even that erudite lady's code of conduct fails to give a rule covering the dilemma in which a Toronto audience found itself this week.

The occasion was a lecture by Dr. Niels Bohr of Copenhagen, 1922 Nobel prize winner in physics, before a group of several hundred people. His subject was "Light and Life" but the reports indicate that the discourse was neither lively nor illuminating. For two hours the speaker spoke and not once during all that time did any person in the hall understand a single sentence. What poor acoutsics started, Dr. Bohr's Danish accent finished. It must have been Bohrsome, yet throughout the audience remained politely silent, to all intents and purposes spellbound by the words of wisdom. For such a feat of co-operative courtesy even Lord Chesterfield would have to admit respect.

Mrs. Post's admonition on the art of breaking "an awkward silence" is to "Let it go for a little while." But apparently these Canadians needed no pointer in etiquette on this subject. Perhaps they had been trained by listening to those after-dinner speeches where one not only doesn't hear what the speaker is saying, but doesn't want to.

I Understand That You Recognize Me.

The Public And The Supreme Court

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proposals of the President with reference to the Supreme Court cannot be adequately described in language which custom and propriety require in discussing the President of the United States. Nothing more sinister has ever been proposed.

Few men and women with any knowledge of conditions will question the desirability of some reform whereby the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of a law, once it is raised, should be quickly determined by the Supreme Court. Statutory provision that every decision by a court of first instance upon a question of constitutionality shall be taken before the Supreme Court on appeal without any delay and there be given priority over any and all other pending cases, would seem to be free from any sound objection.

So much cannot be said, I think, for the President's suggestion that no Federal court shall be permitted to issue any injunction, decree or decision upon any question of constitutionality without first giving "previous and ample notice to the Attorney General and an opportunity for the United States to present evidence and be heard." The objections to that proposal are so serious, it seems to me, as to warrant the forecast that, if adopted, the evils arising from it will be found worse and more numerous than those the "reform" was designed to remedy.

Those of us who have devoted much of our lives to the defense of individual and popular rights and liberties must of necessity be zealous in opposing any encroachments by political authority upon the freedom of our judges. Too often minority groups and their spokesmen, particularly the champions of unpopular causes, have been in the past, and are likely to be in the future, subjects of persecution by governmental agencies, with only the protection of the courts to save them. It is not possible for me to understand how any man or woman worthy of being called a liberal can support this reactionary proposal masquerading as reform.

JOHN SPARGO.
Benningotn, Vt., Feb. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President urges that men over 70 are not up to date and can neither think nor reason in terms of the present day. The function of the Supreme Court is to interpret and decide the law of the land. The law is a good deal older than 70 years, but under a New Deal dispensation the established law is but lightly held and must be bent and twisted as New Deal occasion demands.

Witness within the last few days the Secretary of Labor asking Congress to pass "with all possible haste" an act establishing the legality of "sit-down strikes." The illegality of trespass is as old as the human race and the Supreme Court could do no other than declare such an act, if passed, wholly illegal and unenforceable. But a Supreme Court that could not see eye to eye with a New Deal official would, by that act, declare itself outmoded.

Witness, too, a President demanding the passage by Congress of a certain bill and instructing them "not to be deterred by any consideration of its constitutionality!" That is the blackest phrase on the records of this Government.

This is the most critical moment in the history of this Nation. If the President has his way and is permitted to emasculate the Supreme Court, he may then take his place alongside Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini, and the United States may class itself with Russia, Germany and Italy as a Nation of puppets. People of America, was it for this you re-elected Roosevelt by such an overwhelming majority?

EDWARD C. POTTER.
Washington, Feb. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Knowing well that it will do no good, I still would like to call The Post's attention to the fact that during the last campaign the newspapers were 90 per cent against Roosevelt. The results of the election showed clearly how wrong they were in translating the thoughts of the masses.

Now, on the Supreme Court issue, about which The Post is making such a terrific hubbub of protest, it is only reasonable to suppose that it, and all other reactionary newspapers, are just as wrong now as they were during the political campaign, in reflecting the true wishes of the people of the United States. That adage, "there is no fool like an old fool" surely fits reactionary editors to the proverbial T.

MRS. M. A. EGLOFF.
Washington, Feb. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are living in a fast age. Large bodies like Congress and the House of Representatives often do business slowly, thus causing impatience both on the part of the President and also the people. To obviate this difficulty, Hitler, Mussolini, both have eliminated large bodies of law makers, and have taken it upon themselves to make and execute the laws. We might well ask which of these governments is the better. Evidently the democratic form is best, but we must speed up, for Roosevelt believes in speed, and so do we all. However too much haste would cause needless waste.

CHARLES J. SPURLOCK.
Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of President Roosevelt's recent pronouncement about the Supreme Court, may I offer an apt quotation from the play of "Richelieu":

The lion's skin is too short by far—I must e'en eke it out with the fox's.

E. B. ANDERSON.
Bedford Hills, N. Y., Feb. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Writing in these columns, Mr. G. B. Galloway makes the point, often heard, that in our system of checks and balances there is no check on the Supreme Court. This is mere sophistry. There are two positive checks on the Supreme Court. First, the Constitution, which specifically prescribes its functions; and second, the votes of the electorate. If the people believe the functions of the court should be changed they have a sure and simple way of making the change, and that is by amending the Constitution, which is the most democratic of all the acts of citizens under our form of government.

Mr. Galloway falls into an error of fact in stating that amendments are ratified by the Legislatures. The last amendment was ratified by one of the methods laid down in the Constitution, namely, by conventions of delegates chosen by the electorate on the single issue, so that the result was a true mandate of the people. In this way the people can change the functions of the court in any way they choose, or even abolish it altogether.

Again Mr. Galloway says: "Nor is a system of checks and balances an indispensable feature of a democratic government." To the best of knowledge and belief, the English form of government was definitely ended in this country in 1787, after some four years of unpleasantness, and certain patriots of that time, under the leadership of Gen. Washington, and after several months of intensive study of the subject, formulated a plan of government especially intended to avoid the faults of the English form, under which the Americans had suffered much injustice. I would further call attention to the fact that the high court of the British Empire recently declared a New Deal act of the Canadian Parliament unconstitutional and void. A majority of the republics of South America, and the newer ones in Europe, give their highest courts power to declare legislative acts unconstitutional.

The old point that the Supreme Court is not authorized by the Constitution to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional is made by Mr. Galloway. The one sufficient answer to this is, that it has been approved by the people since it was first assumed over 100 years ago.

E. LEAVENWORTH ELLIOTT.
Washington, Feb. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I always read with much interest communications to your valuable paper. Permit me to add the following names for judges of the Supreme Court to the list submitted by Hugh Johnson: Heywood Broun, Congressman Maverick, Earl Browder, Governor Earle, Senator M. M. Neely, Linn E. A. Gale, Madam Perkins, George Berry and Hugh Johnson.

N. E. BROWN.
St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the Seventy-fifth Congress, led almost wholly by Southern statesmen, obeys President Roosevelt's demand, he will have made himself complete master of all three branches of our National Government, as Stalin is in Russia, Hitler in Germany, Mussolini in Italy.

In that event laws can again be enacted punishing with fine and imprisonment Texas farmers who plant on their own acres crops forbidden them by Federal carpetbaggers. A Supreme Court packed for the purpose may be expected to find such laws constitutional. Other laws, taking from the Southern people control of elections and public education, and placing that control in the hands of Presidential appointees more eager to please Moscow and Harlem than Charleston and Houston, can reasonably be anticipated.

FRANK PUTNAM.
Houston, Tex., Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Herewith a little prayer:

Mr. President, who sits on the throne, broader grow your smile. Thy will be done in the Supreme Court as it is in Congress. Give us this week our weekly honeyed phrases. Forgive us if we speak or think ill of you, for we are nit-wits . . Thy dictatorship will come as it has in Russia and Germany. Lead us into still waters and green pastures, do not allow any economic royalists or princes of greed in. And may you be with us there, for without you all is lost.

M. C. JENKINS.
Chaptico, Md., Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A case can be carried to the Supreme Court as quickly or as slowly as the litigants desire. The NRA is a good example. Just when the lumber cases had reached the court, the New Dealers decided to drop it and thus delay the demise of the NRA.

The Supreme Court has declared and repeated from time to time that it had nothing to do with the wisdom of acts of Congress—the question of power, and the execution of that power, were what it decided. Through the whole of the New Deal regime, one can see a definite pattern to have the court's power reduced so that there would be no interference with the socialistic ideas of the few, and the ultimate assumption of supreme power.

BORIS J. FRIEDKISS.
Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is chivalry and reverence entirely lacking in our Congressmen that not one has protested against the insults and indelicacies poured out upon our members of the Supreme Court? They are among the finest of our statesmen and we have reason to be proud of them. They have never shown any signs of senility nor any other physical or mental disability. In fact they seem saner than most public men today. They show balance and reasonable restraint.

M. M. STOCKWELL.
Annapolis, Md., Feb. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every now and then I see that some one rushes into print to tell us what "wonderful things" Mr. Roosevelt has done for the "dear peepul." Yes and among the "wonderful things" is to reduce the purchasing power of the dollar to 59 cents and thus increase the cost of living for 130,000,000 people who have to eat by 41 cents. And for what purpose? Simply to benefit a few millions of farmers, who for 130 years have never intelligently tried to help themselves.

And now, his dictatorship is trying to make the Supreme Court of the United States subservient to his will. Shades of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland and Wilson!

A REAL DEMOCRAT.
Arlington, Va., Feb. 9.

Panderers To Eroticism

Reprinted from a recent issue of the Saturday Review of Literature.

ORGANIZATIONS which devote themselves to the extra-legal protection of public morals by means of censorship and terrorism are usually not heavily endowed. They have invested funds as the result of bequests from people who believe in their disgusting activity, but these are disheartieningly small and the societies are forced to depend for their existence on contributions. The people who make contributions are worthy but incline to be negligent; it is easy to forget one's duty to the uplift unless frequently reminded of it.

So our censors remind their supporters by making spectacular drives on pumped-up waves of pornography and on conspicuous books against which a momentarily plausible allegation of obscenity can be made. The more spectacular the better, and the more conspicuous the better. The publicity thus produced reaches the contributors and notifies them that their organization is on the job. It is by no means necessary to win the case; success in such a prosecution is so much velvet, the real desideratum being the publicity, which brings in contributions. Whenever you read that an antivice society is taking action against some book, play or picture, you may be pretty sure that its managers are worried about the budget. This is the economic determination of public purity.

Twenty-four years of altruistic devotion to dirty postcards and the kind of books boy of 13 read in back alleys have trained Mr. John S. Sumner to detect pronography where decent people cannot find it. As a specialist in pornography he has all the authority that a lifelong habituation to it can give him; such an authority as can be achieved only by spending hundreds of sleepless nights judicially studying photographs produced for the tourist trade, turning them over and over till dawn comes, repeatedly consulting trained responses to determine which fall short and which get over the line.

The routine material of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, whose secretary Mr. Sumner is, is the back alley and rear-room trade, but one judges that this does not produce a satisfactory income, for every so often the society takes up literature in a big way. It always gets slapped down: you can step into any bookstore and buy "The Genius," "Jurgen," "God's Little Acre" and many other books it has conspicuously proceeded against. But it keeps coming back so often as to suggest that mere purity may not be its principal objective. Let us remember the chance of contributions when we consider the prosecution newly brought against one of the best American novels of 1936.

You and I and all normal people fail to detect pornography in Mr. James Farrell's "A World I Never Made." By a striking coincidence, the Book-of-the-Month Club has just awarded the author of that novel a prize of $2,500 five days before Mr. Sumner's contemptible proceedings are due to bring him into court.

• • • •

What blinds our guilty eyes is Mr. Farrell's intellectual integrity, his high artistic achievement, his book's memorable representation of human pain and human tragedy. But Mr. Sumner has trained himself to disregard such things in his professional pursuit of other values. His guess is that he can make out a plausible case against the book. He will feel good if he does; and, of course, even if he doesn't, his efforts will produce a lot of publicity.

One more skirmish in the endless battle for the right of the public to read literature and of authors to write it. The battle must go on so long as there is bigotry in the world, so long as there are minds which have to disguise their abnormal pleasure in eroticism as a—detailed—horror of eroticism, and so long as money can be raised by alleging pornography in places where it does not exist.

The fact that it is getting easy to defeat the Society for the Suppression of Vice must not make us lax. It's time to turn out the guard again. Men of good will, decent people, normal people, people who believe that literature must be defended against diseased minds, people who believe in liberty, people who believe that bigoted minorities must be prevented from working their purposes on society, people who have the probity of the law and of American culture at heart, must take up the fight again and see it through.

Alchemy.

When steel hit par on the stock exchange the other day, what a molten stream of memories was tapped from the furnaces of speculative minds! Back in 1929 one of the boys who had high blood pressure was asked what he was going to do about it. "When steel and my blood pressure hit 300 I'm going to sell both," he said. Lots of fellows who got high blood pressure then, say that it stays up better than stocks.

But steel at par is a miracle for all that. Recalling that when issued in 1900 steel common represented nothing but pure water, who can deny the miraculous powers of Messrs. Morgan, Carnegie, Frick, Gates, Schwab and Gary? Talk of turning water into wine—why, they turned it into gold!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Uplift In Chicago.

Chicago.

THEY SEEM to be spoiling for another of those great civic uplift fights in Chicago, and from where I sit I can look out over the scene of the last one, which drew only a little less than three million dollars.

After the Tunney-Dempsey uplift ceremonies at Soldier Field, Chicago had a World's Fair two years running, and this served to establish the skin-show as legitimate art for the American masses. Some people said the World's Fair made Miss Sally Rand, but it would be more like it to say that she made the World's Fair, because, with the aid of a wise court decision, she drew vast crowds of art lovers to the exposition and established the legitimacy of the only prosperous attraction in the entire effort.

A learned judge before whom Miss Rand appeared on a charge of immodest behavior remarked that some people would wish to put pants on a horse—adding, however, that he meant nothing personal as to the fair defendant—and this judgment established the legal precedent which protected many lesser ladies in little booths and cubicles along the Midway. In no time at all there were so many skin-shows at the World's Fair that a tour of the art center was remindful of nothing so much as a visit to the autopsy room at a prosperous morgue.

• • • •

MOST OF THE LADIES were utterly immobile and impersonal toward the art lovers who came to peer at them through peepholes or slots for 15 cents per glance or study the feminine silhouette thrown against a tablecloth or sheet by an arrangement of lights.

Some of the art lovers went back so often that they got landlady's eye, which is a narrow squint caused by peering through boarders' keyholes. Miss Rand's skin, however, was not a 15-cent attraction. Hers cost a dollar, but she gave good measure, and a patron of art could sit there in comparative comfort and gaze for 15 minutes—and not through any peephole, either—at a pelt which in the long run has proved much more valuable than any garment of chinchilla or Russian sable ever manufactured.

About $70,000 would be the top price for the most expensive wrap that Miss Rand could find in all the world, and that would be mere alley-rabbit compared to the value of the hide that she was born in.

I guess it isn't quite correct to say that the skin-shows were the only prosperous attraction of the fair. Mr. Charlie Pyle, author of the transcontinental bunion derbies, also struck the aesthetic fancy of the people with a freak show starring an artiste known as the Mulefaced Lady. This was no fake, because the lady did look exactly like a mule and she could flap her lower lip in a way to make a boy from Moberly or Mexico, Mo., break down and cry of homesickness.

Mr. Pyle used to complain of Good Time Charlies congesting the stage alley outside his show waiting around at night with sprigs of hay and nosebags of oats, but I never saw any—and I received this information with the utmost reserve, as they say in the British Foreign Office.

• • • •

I DON'T KNOW whether Miss Rand and her sisters in the skin-show business were responsible or not, and it may even be that Tunney and Dempsey deserve credit for a remote assist on the play, but indubitably there has been a distinct change in Chicago since those days. There is not anywhere near as much shooting as there used to be and life seems quieter and more secure.

Then somebody would creep up to that one's house at night and toss over a transom a package of dynamite—known in those days as a mash note—and splatter his whole family all over the place. Then that one would be tied in a sack with a rope running from his neck to his heels and dumped on the front porch of some judge or United States Senator for a souvenir. They called this the Sicilian bag trick, and people thought it was pretty cute.

They seem not to do these things any more, but whether they got improved through the Tunney-Dempsey uplift thing or the ennobling appeal of the skin-shows, who can say? Maybe they just ran out of raw material—which would be a mitigated tragedy if so.

The Braddock-Louis uplift project may continue the improvement of Chicago. Other cities have other susceptibilities, but Chicago knows what is good for her, and strange devices have been used ere this to make the town a better place to live in, with indisputable though microscopic results.

Angela Morgan

By William Lyon Phelps

Washington Poet.

In her volume of poems called "Forward March!" Angela Morgan has a virile poem called "When Nature Wants a Man." It is a spirited tribute to Abraham Lincoln, with an ingenious metrical scheme of rhythms and rhymes, the whole poem moving to martial music.

Angela Morgan has published a number of volumes of verse, all of which breathe energy. It would be a misnomer to call her a poetess; she is a poet. Born in Washington, D. C., she read an original poem at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Washington; she was the first woman ever to speak in the Chapel Royal of the Savoy at London.

• • • •

Her work illustrates the art of good declamation; I have space here only to give her explanatory preface and the first stanza of her poem. For the remaining three stanzas, consult the book mentioned above.

Only melting and hammering steel can shape and temper steel for fine use. Only struggle and suffering can give a man the qualities that enable him to render service to humanity. Lincoln was born in a log cabin. He split rails and conned a few books by the firelight in the evening. He became a backwoods lawyer with apparently no advantages or encouraging prospects. But all the while he had his visions, which ever became nobler, and the adversities he knew but gave him the deeper sympathy for others and the wider and steadier outlook on human problems. Thus when the supreme need arose, Lincoln was ready—harsh-visaged nature had done its work of moulding and preparing a man.

• • • •

When Nature wants to drill a man
And thrill a man,
And skill a man,
When Nature wants to mould a man
To play the noblest part;
When she yearns with all her heart
To create so great and bold a man
That all the world shall praise—
Watch her method, watch her ways!
How she ruthlessly perfects
Whom she royally elects;
How she hammers him and hurts him,
And with mighty blows converts him
Into trial shapes of clay which only Nature understands—
While his tortured heart is crying and he lifts beseeching hands!—
How she bends, but never breaks,
When his good she undertakes . . .
How she uses whom she chooses
And with every purpose fuses him,
By every art induces him
To try his splendor out—
Nature knows what she's about.

Trotsky In Mexico

Presence Of World Revolutionary May Serve As Wedge To Split Radical Ranks, Observer Reports.

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico City.

LONG YEARS before the House of Romanoff began to produce rulers of Russia, the little town of Coyoacan, not far from Mexico City, was the home of one of the world's most famous conquerors. His name was Hernando Cortes. Today, once again, the eyes of the world are turned upon that little town, for it houses another conqueror, most of whose triumphs were secured more through the pen than with the sword. His name is Leon Trotzky, one time Commisar for War in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Expelled from Norway on charges of violating an agreement that he would not attempt political activities while in that country, Trotzky was offered asylum by the government of Mexico. The offer was made at the behest of Diego Rivera, famous painter, and that wing of the Communist Party of Mexico which favors the Trotzky program. Arriving at Tampico on January 9, Trotzky spent the night there and then came to Mexico City by train. Automobiles whisked his party to the little village which lies southeast of the capital, and there the world's most talked-of political exile has since remained.

Shortly after getting settled in his new surroundings, he called in the members of the press for a long and extended conference. For the most part, he spoke in generalities, contrasting the tropical nature of this valley with the colder Norwegian regions he had just left. Although questioned about Mexican and American politics, he begged to be excused from answering, since he said it would be necessary for him to study the former, and he would not comment on the latter, since he had no wish to endanger the foreign policy of the country that was his host.

AS FOR RUSSIA, he referred the reporters to a new book which will soon be published in New York. In it will be his latest estimate of Soviet policy, as made and maintained by Stalin. He hoped, he said, to finish his biography of Lenin and, in general, looked upon his Mexican stay as a chance to recuperate from the strenuous life of flight, exile, and journalistic work he has lived since leaving Russia.

But he was not quiet for long. As soon as the so-called "Trotzky conspirators" went on trial in Moscow, their exiled "leader" went into action, editorially speaking. Each day a long article from his pen poured out a searching criticism of what was going on 5,000 miles away; questions, taunts, accusations, he flung in the face of the prosecution. To one who does not know all the ins and outs of his sensational break with Stalin, it seems that Trotzky has made a good defense (though eminently futile at this writing) of himself and the "13 that were shot," to paraphrase Andreyev's famous "Seven That Were Hanged."

Trotzky contends that the witnesses were tortured into giving the confessions they made; that their evidence, plus the documentary "proof" furnished by the prosecution, is false in every detail; that to try to make him out a Fascist is as ridiculous as it is to believe that Stalin is carrying on the work for which the exile and Lenin starved and fought and bled to bring to fruition. The Mexican reporters remarked that the famous builder of the Red army reminded them of a university professor; his marshaling of evidence against Moscow has a professional touch in the way he assembled it.

TURNING from Trotzky to the various attitudes Mexicans have shown toward him, it is to be noted that, at first, he was a most distinctly unwanted personage by the majority of the people. Although most of the press agreed that the government had a right to extend the right of asylum to a political refugee, some asked the question: "Is it not strange to see us welcoming a political exile from Russia when we have had many recent, illegal cases of our own, in which Mexican citizens, in defiance of the constitutoin, have been exiled?"

The Stalin wing of the Communist Party in Mexico had threatened, before Trotzky arrived, to meet him with a hostile demonstration. They did all they could to keep him out of the country. Lombardo Toledano, head of the powerful Confederation of Mexican Workers, at first read a sort of ultimatum to President Cardenas on the subject of giving Trotzky refuge. When the chief executive retorted sharply that Mexico would extend the right of asylum, the C. T. M. chieftain called off his watchdogs, but suggested that Trotzky had better not meddle in Mexican political affairs. Since Toledano is generally considered to be favorable to Stalin, his opposition has its roots exposed.

The public generally did not favor Trotzky's presence in Mexico. His fearsome reputation as the collaborator of Lenin, coupled with his leadership of the Red army, made people uneasy at the very thought of his being in their midst. Too, his Fourth International program, dedicated to world revolution, suggests that his promise not to act politically while in Mexico will be difficult for him to keep. How, people ask, can a man who believes in world revolution, who has preached it for a generation, refrain from doing something about it, no matter where he is? And does he remember that terror, as a political weapon, was not foreign to the policy of himself and Lenin?

BUT MEXICANS, again generally, did get their backs up in Trotzky's defense some days ago when a rumor reached the country that Russia was going to ask Mexico to silence the recluse of Coyoacan, because of his trial articles. The reaction was: "He's here now, and he's probably right about Stalin and his satellites being perfidious in the matter of the recent trials. Anyway, we refuse to allow Russia to tell us what we should do in our own country." Newspaper editorials were particularly strong in making this point.

The reported arrest of Serge Sedov-Trotsky, the exile's son, drew a heart-rending statement from Mme. Trotsky, who accompanied her husband to Mexico. She pleaded for the judgment of the world, defended her son, told everyone what a fine chap he was. Although many a Mexican heart is steeled against the elderly couple, it is almost certain that compassion and pity welled up in them when the mother cried out against the danger that threatens her boy.

In one particular sense, the presence of Trotsky makes the task of Mexican radicals, whatever their affiliation, a bit more difficult. Toledano has called on the workers, the peons, and the Communist Party itself to form a "United Front" (accepted Communist tactics) against the forces of "reaction" which he says threaten Cardenas and the social program, especially in the next (July) congressional elections.

A wit from the opposition side has asked the sprightly question: "How can you get a 'United Front' if the Communists themselves cannot agree as to how the Gospel of Marx is to be interpreted?"

Eucharistic Congress.

Manila.

ARRIVAL IN MANILA directly from Rome of Dennis Cardinal Dougherty on February 1, together with an assorted number of European archbishops and bishops, virtually started the Thirty-third International Eucharistic Congress here.

The American cardinal came directly from Rome, carrying papal messages and benedictions. But, aside from the ecclesiastical halo with which he was thus vested, he returned to the Philippines in triumph. Tears were streaming down his face as he responded briefly to the speech of welcome Manila's mayor delivered at the waterfront.

"After 21 years of absence," he said, "I revisit the Philippines, my heart welling with emotion. In my early years as bishop I worked with and learned to love the Filipino people."

No better choice of a papal legate could have been made. The cardinal spent his earlier years in the Philippines, as did the late William Howard Taft and Gen. Pershing. To Filipinos and Americans alike, these great Americans who spent years in the Philippines and thus "got their polish" are veritable heroes. And it is true that the cardinal is the highest American ecclesiastic with a Philippine background. The Manila press acclaimed not his "visit," but his "homecoming."

• • • •

BUT THE CONGRESS, in spite of the American cardinal's universal popularity, was handicapped in two particulars. The American maritime strike reduced the number of ocean liners calling in Manila to one-fifth. Pilgrims had to travel on especially chartered ships. Italian and German vessels made special calls in Manila for the benefit of delegates to the congress.

Another handicap was a carnival about a block away from the provisional ammphitheater built for the congress. The carnival management, it is true, tried to be accommodating. It changed its name from "Philippine Carnival" to "Philippine Exposition," in an attempt to conceal or eliminate its frivolous nature. It moved from the Luneta, where it would have been right across the street from the congress, to the sunken gardens below the Intramuros Wall about a block farther away.

But, since the bulk of the expected 1,000,000 pilgrims were natives from the provinces and visiting, the "carnival" offered keen competion to the congress.

• • • •

THE CONGRESS had a very serious business behind its solemn rituals and medieval pageantries. The Philippines are the frontier of Roman Catholicism in the East. It must be conserved and, from it the frontier pushed forward. And, if one takes into account the fact that Catholicism is not any too secure in other countries like Germany, the need of conserving territories like the Philippines and of entering new ones is at once apparent.

President Quezon, being a good Catholic, might have been one of the main attractions of the congress. But when Cardinal Dougherty arrived in Malacanan Palace, where he will be the guest of the state, Quezon was lunching with the Emperor in Japan. He was passing through on his way to Washington. The President, however, welcomed the cardinal by radiophone. Even with oceans separating him, Quezon stages his dramas in Manila.

With some 10,000 pilgrims from abroad and nearly 1,000,000 from the provinces attending the congress, Manila's normally snarled traffic became worse. Except for the fact that a bridge was completed in time over the Pasig River and that Manila's traffic corps has been experimenting on new traffic rules for months, the congress would have found Manila's streets completely clogged by vehicles ranging from carabao carts to Rolls Royces.

The Candid Valentine.

Then I'm for you.

This Valentine
Is so much tripe;
I'm not the cute and
Lacey type.

• • • •

On verses I Would put a blight . . .
Kid, how about
Tomorrow night?

• • • •

With love for you
I'm all aglow;
Do you love me? Say
Yes or no!

With you alone
I sense the glory—
Or anyhow
That is my story.

• • • •

I think of you this holiday
And, oh, it makes my heart so gay!
You are the one and only dame . . .
I beg your pardon, what's the name?

If you love me
As I expect,
You won't mind if
This comes "collect."

Just this card to make you feel
That I am not a rubber heel;
Read it and return it, dear . . .

Massachusetts Governor's Opposition To Child Labor Amendment Worries Unions; C. I. O. And Federation Agree.

By Joel Underwood.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Boston.

THE RECENTLY ANNOUNCED opposition of Gov. Hurley to the child labor amendment has alienated the leaders of organized labor to such an extent that they are beginning to wonder whether it would not have been better to have lined up behind Republican Haigis, Hurley's opponent in the last campaign. The first real suspicion that the Governor was not going to be of very much help was aroused at the inauguration, when his address failed to make any mention of a labor program, an oversight of which no Massachusetts Governor has been guilty for many years. The estrangement between Hurley and organized labor groups will probably have an adverse effect upon the legislative plans of the latter.

The clue to the difficulties which the child labor amendment has experienced in the 13 years since it was first introduced is to be found in the opposition of the Catholic and Protestant Episcopal hierarchies. The amendment was defeated in a referendum vote in 1924 as a Communistic attack on the parochial schools, and interest in it lapsed until 1933.

In that year, the prospects of ratification by the legislature were strengthened by strong talk about recovery and reform. Catholic labor leaders, including the president of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, James Moriarty, sought to discover whether William Cardinal O'Connell would oppose the amendment. A meeting was arranged with the cardinal, and, in a subsequent exchange of letters, the latter's secretary told Moriarty that the cardinal was not opposed. When the question of ratification came before the legislature, however, the cardinal made public his opposition, and the amendment was defeated.

Attitude Of Church Important In Capitol.

IN A GREAT MANY matters, but in this legislation particularly, many of the Irish Catholic legislators on the Hill never make a move without first ascertaining, if possible, the attitude of the representatives of the church. This degree of loyalty is perhaps the most important single political factor in Massachusetts. When, in addition to this, opposition is publicly made by the Right Rev. William Lawrence and most of the metropolitan press, the amendment has little chance of ratification.

Although attitudes and not arguments are the persuasive factors, the Massachusetts Federation of Labor is sponsoring legislation to meet the argument that Congress is an improper authority to entrust with the broad powers granted by the amendment. This legislation, which will be heard by the education committee of the House, seeks to increase the compulsory school age in Massachusetts from 14 to 16 years. The purpose of this proposal is to offer the General Court an opportunity to enact further State restrictions on child labor in the probable event of the failure of the national amendment.

Another set of three proposals represents an effort to bring the Commonwealth in line with the Federal Government in the scope of its labor legislation. An act has been proposed to require that all State contracts amounting to $1,000 or more must include minimum wage standards, maximum hours and collective bargaining guarantees.

This bill will be pushed as vigorously as possible by labor interests in view of the Governor's attitude toward the plans for the refunding of the bonds of the Boston & Maine Railroad. The road is proposing through its attorney, Joseph B. Ely, that the State accept 3 per cent bonds of the Fitchburg Railroad which it controls, in place of the 4 per cent bonds of the Boston & Maine now held by the State. This arrangement will be used by labor representatives as a talking point in the hearings for fixed labor standards in State contracts.

The other two proposals are the so-called "baby Wagner act," which is substantially the same as the national Walsh-Connery act, and a bill to prohibit the use of stool pigeons, private police and strike-breakers during labor disputes. These measures are more useful during organizing campaigns than for the normal period of peaceful labor relations. Two such campaigns, one in fact and the other in prospect, would find such legislation helpful. The first is the effort of the United Textile Workers to organize the Simon-Schuster mills, and the second is the expected drive of the C. I. O. group to organize the steel mills in Worcester.

State Compensation Fund Is Being Urged.

PERHAPS of more pressing importance than any of these proposals is the bill to establish a State fund for workmen's compensation. This legislation is intended to take private insurance companies out of the field. The provisions of the existing legislation do not compare very favorably with the best States of the Union in such matters as the coverage of employes and the amount of benefits accruing. It is felt by labor groups that the private insurance scheme puts pressure upon employers to discharge workers who show incipient diseases or who, because of advancing age, are not such good risks as the younger men.

In connection with this matter there has been recently submitted to the General Court, a report from the Commissioner of Labor and Industries which reveals that workers in Massachusetts of the age of 45 and over are being discharged in favor of younger men. The recommended legislation accompanying this report seeks to forbid employers to discharge a man merely because of his age.

This bill is not likely to receive much support even among labor officials. Besides the difficulty of determining when an employer is discharging an employee because of his age and when he is not, the bill might have an adverse effect upon the administration of workmen's compensation. There is some fear that insurance companies might require employers to discover the true ages of employes for insurance purposes under pretense of compliance with the act.

The immediate occasion for the State fund proposal is the agitation among silicotic workers in Taunton, and those exposed to this disease who are not considered to be good risks by the insurance companies. These workers have been Exhibit A in previous efforts to amend the workmen's compensation act, but such activity has so far been without avail. It is the hope of labor leaders that this session will tell a different story.

Although the Federation is directly sponsoring this legislation, its influence will probably be most strongly felt in the consideration of legislation which has been otherwise introduced to the general court. Here as elsewhere it is strongest when it commands a balance of power.

C. I. O. And Federation Show No Sign Of Split.

IN APPEARANCES before the committees of the Legislature there has been no split between the unions in the C. I. O. and those of the Federation. Indeed the C. I. O. group has not been disaffiliated from the State Federation so that the latter body officially represents the C. I. O. unions through its legislative agents. There was a movement in the State convention of the Federation last August to commit the whole labor movement in Massachusetts to industrial unionism, but it fell far short of carrying. Since that time, however, there have been no reprisals, and co-operation has been the rule.

This has been due in part to the shrewdness of the secretary of the Federation, Robert J. Watt, and in part to the fact that there have been as yet no real clashes between the two factions on the industrial front. The secretary has been instrumental in making it impossible for hostile legislators to divide labor representation at legislative hearings, and has rallied the C. I. O. group to the support of the program for the present session. The conflict on the industrial front has yet to appear, but if it does it will probably make the legislative work of the Federation difficult.

Certainly the C. I. O. unions have much to gain by supporting the present program. If enacted, legislation preventing unfair labor practises by employers and prohibitions against the use of spies and strike breakers would be of considerable aid in organizing campaigns, if only for propagandist purposes.

Most of the legislation has less than an even chance of being enacted, but it is safe to predict that whatever fails to become law this year will be unfinished business for next year. The battle for labor legislation in this State, where circumstances are more favorable than in many, is usually a siege of long duration.

Management Unit Urges Wage Boost

Pittsburgh, Feb. 11 (AP).—Management representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation joined late today with employe representatives of 18 district mills in approving a general increase of 80 cents a day and establishment of a $5-a-day wage minimum.

The two groups, making up the Pittsburgh district council and representing 50,000 of Carnegie-Illinois' 100,000 workers, also approved a 40-hour work week and a resolution that women be paid "the prevailing" rate of wages for labor.

Under the company-sponsored representation plan, the raise will become binding after adoption at individual plants by employe representatives and the management.

Japanese Emperor Marks Anniversary

Tokyo, Feb. 11 (AP).—Emperor Hirohito discarded his customary modern dress today for a dazzling medieval court costume to receive the congratulations of his people on the 2,597th anniversary of the founding of his royal dynasty and the Japanese empire.

A gala parade of 200,000 persons converged on the palace and shouted their "banzais" while the Emperor and Empress and the princess of the blood worshiped the spirits of their ancestors.

Afterwards, at a glittering banquet the head of the world's oldest empire acknowledged the salutes of envoys of modern countries, including United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew.

Bombers' Panama Trip Assures Canal Defense

Langley Field, Va., Feb. 11 (AP).—General headquarters of the Army Air Force hailed completion today of the round-trip flight of eight Martin bombers to France Field, Panama, as proof it is unnecessary to maintain a large air force in the Canal Zone for its defense against major attacks.

The bomber squadron, trailed by an amphibian observer that accompanied it on the 4,000-mile flight, dropped down at the home base here at 3:50 p. m., E. S. T., after a leisurely flight from Miami, Fla.

Philadelphia, Feb. 11 (AP).—Miss Annetta Smith will take the $30,000 left to her in the will of her boss and stay right on the job at the desk where she worked for 29 years as his private secretary.

The bequest was revealed today with the filing of the will of Francis B. Bracken, attorney and chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association. He died last week.

2 High Officials Believed Held In Reds' Purge

GPU Reported Questioning Its Former Chief and Voroshiloff Aide.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 11.—Two men high in the ranks of Soviet leadership were mentioned prominently today as reported subjects of GPU (secret police) investigation as informed Russians and foreign residents discussed renewed police activity in the wake of the recent Trotzkyist conspiracy trial.

They were Marshal Mikhail Tukachevsky, vice commissar for defense, and G. G. Yagoda, commissar for posts and telegraphs. Tukachevsky is second only to the powerful defense commissar, Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff, in command of the Red army.

In the atmosphere of suspicion and conjecture which has pervaded Moscow since the trial last month of 17 alleged Trotzkyist conspirators—of whom 13 were shot and 4 sent to prison—there was comment on the absence from Moscow of Tukachevsky after mention of his name during that trial by Karl Radek, one of the defendants.

Reported on Vacation.

However, it was asserted authoritatively he is at Sochi, a resort on the Black Sea. Officials said he was on vacation and denied unofficial reports he was being questioned by the GPU.

His name came into the Radek-Sokolnikoff trial January 26 when Radek—later sentenced to 10 years in prison—said Gen. Vitokva Putna was sent to him by Tukachevsky to test some materials.

Putna, formerly military attache to the Soviet embassies in Tokyo, Berlin and London, was recalled from London and arrested last August after his name had been mentioned in the trial of Gregory Zinovieff, Leon Kameneff and 14 others, all of whom were convicted of treason and shot.

In the recent trial Radek was recalled to the stand after his mention of Marshal Tukachevsky and closely questioned again by the prosecutor, Andrey Vishinsky, in what appeared to be an effort to clear the vice commissar for defense.

Radek Clears Marshal.

Grinning, Radek obliged by explaining the marshal had no part or knowledge of the so-called "parallel center" conspiracy—that for which Radek and his companions were on trial.

Three of Tukachevsky's fellow vice commissars already have been arrested, and two of them, Gregory Piatikoff, former vice commissar for heavy industry, and J. A. Livschitz, former vice commissar for railways, were found guilty in the Radek trial and shot.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Eccentricity.

I once knew a man who insisted on closing his eyes when he crossed a road. He used to defend himself by saying "Most of the time there are no cars coming along; and the rest of the time, the driver can stop or go around me. So there's almost no danger, and think of all the fun I have!"

Then, one day, he got hit. Fortunately, he was not hurt much—which may explain why his friends took great pains to tell him, "Serves you right!"

I always think of that eccentric friend when I see the type of carelessness which led to South's downfall in today's hand.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ◇
Pass	5 ◇	Pass	6 ◇
Pass	Pass	Pass

West's original pass and his own barren hand induced East to put in his rather flimsy overcall. But the opponents had too much strength and too good a fit to be kept out of a slam.

West opened the King of spades, thinking it safe because of East's bid, and South won with the Ace. Now South led a diamond, and wavered a little when West followed with the five-spot. A few seconds were enough to bring declarer to the conclusion that it was too much trouble to think. So he finessed. And East won with his blank King and gave West a spade-ruff.

South immediately wailed, "Wouldn't that burn you up? I have the worst luck in the world. Why, it took two blank Kings to beat me!"

His self-pity was interrupted by North's acid statement to the effect that the slam was lay-down in spite of the unusual distribution. What North added to that brief analysis was, perhaps, more interesting but not exactly to the point.

But he was right. All South had to do was take the diamond Ace at once. If East should show out, the King could be driven out and South would still have at least two trumps for club-ruffs, and would make four trumps in the dummy. His six top cards in the side suits would yield the rest of the tricks. If East should follow suit, it would be even easier. And since the King would have dropped on the Ace, South would have made an overtrick instead of being set.

Lincoln Honors Will Be Headed By Roosevelt

President Will Lead Rites at Memorial; Army Band to Play.

President Roosevelt will lead Washington and the Nation today in observing the 128th anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

The Chief Executive is expected to attend services at the Lincoln Memorial at 12:30 p. m., under the auspices of the District Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

Chairman of the committee on arrangements for the observance is Col. L. A. Crawford, U. S. A. There will be honor guards of soldiers and Marines.

Army Band to Play.

When the President arrives, the Army Band will play the Presidential ruffles and flourishes, then "Hail to the Chief." Mr. Roosevelt's wreath will be placed by an aide, and after the departure of the White House party wreaths will be placed by representatives of all military orders in the District.

The Department of the Potomac of the Grand Army of the Republic will hold birthday exercises this evening at 8 o'clock in First Congregational Church.

The principal address at these services will be delivered by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney.

A feature of today's observances will be the meeting of the Dames of the Loyal Legion at 12:30 p. m. in the Carlton Hotel. At this gathering Mme. Cantacuzene, granddaughter of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, will read several letters from President Lincoln to her grandfather.

Rep. Randolph to Speak.

Representative Randolph, of West Virginia, will speak and Mrs. Mary Longan Tucker, daughter of Gen. Logan, of Civil War fame, president of the organization, will preside.

Daughters of the American Revolution will observe the occasion at 12:15 p. m., with wreath laying at the memorial, along with the other patriotic groups.

John Claggett Proctor will be guest speaker of the Federation of Women's Clubs in the District in observing the day with an address, "Abraham Lincoln, the Man," over WMAL this afternoon at 2:15 o'clock.

Although no special program has been included in the school calendar, some divisions and in some cases individual principals have arranged celebrations.

New French Envoy On Way to Capital

Havre, France, Feb. 11 (U.P.).—Georges Bonnet sailed for America yesterday on the Ile de France to seek a revision of his country's $4,025,000,000 war debt to the United States and an agreement to promote Franco-American trade.

Ambassador William C. Bullitt and many parliamentarians bade him farewell as he sailed with a year's supply of fine champagne, wines, truffles and fois gras.

Bonnet, formerly French finance minister, vigorously denied that France would seek financial aid from the United States as a part of the debt settlement.

Kansas City Woman Accused In New McElroy Kidnap Threat

Note Demanded $500 From Figure in 1933 Abduction.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 11.—Threat of a second kidnaping for Miss Mary McElroy, who was ransomed for $30,000 in 1933 by her father, City Manager H. F. McElroy, became known today with the filming of Federal extortion charges against a woman.

It was charged that the woman, Joyce McGee, alias Peggy Hughes, alias Joyce Nash, alias Joyce McBrayer, wrote a threatening letter to McElroy early this week. It was signed Joyce Richetti and was mailed from a hospital to which the woman was taken when she became ill while serving a vagrancy sentence.

Miss McElroy was held captive by kidnapers for 29 hours in May, 1933. She was released unharmed after her father and brother, Henry F. McElroy, jr., paid the ransom.

Mattson Suspect Cleared.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 11 (A.P.).—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and State patrol officers announced today they had dropped questioning and further investigation of H. A. Post, 32, a former convict, held here in connection with kidnap-murder of Charles Mattson.

Lincoln Statue Here Attracts Large Crowds

to see it, of the colored man who keeps it clean and kindred topics.

A little while earlier two couples had come up. The men removed their hats as they approached the martyred President. They kept their heads bared until time to leave. This, it seems, is not unusual, it being explained that a large percentage of the male visitors perform the same reverential rite.

On this particular night the statue and the floor were quite dry, in contrast to their state for several nights preceding when condensing moisture sent rivulets of perspiration down the yard-long face of Mr. Lincoln and gave the floor a distinctly marine aspect.

Statue Scrubbed.

Twice already this week, said the affable guard, the sculpture had ben doused with a hose and then scrubbed to protect its immaculacy against the mischief-making dew.

The chat also touched on the folks who approach apologetically after the 9:30 p. m. closing hour for "just a glimpse because we have to leave the city early tomorrow morning," on the fact that Lincoln wears a sad expression when you view his face from one angle and one of good humor when you stand along the opposite wall, on the increasing number of persons who are pilgrimaging to the shrine.

When it was ended and the sentinel was left alone with his charge, the west wind's flight 'twixt the pillars sounded more melancholy than before.

2 Unhurt in Plane Fall.

Seattle, Feb. 11 (A.P.).—Two fliers plunged into Lake Union in a small pontoon-equipped airplane yesterday and escaped unhurt. Leonard J. Stith, instructor, and E. F. Kiso, student, were starting a practice flight, with Kiso at the controls, when the ship side-slipped from a height of about 75 feet. Stith forced open a cabin door and got Kiso out before the plane settled. Coast Guardsmen rescued the men.

French Cabinet Called as Spain Tension Grows

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 11.—The cabinet tonight was summoned to meet in extraordinary session tomorrow following increasing indications that France, alarmed by foreign intervention in the Spanish civil war, might be prepared to take a hand in the Spanish conflict.

Premier Leon Blum's newspaper Le Populaire, warning Italy and Germany "to cease their sabotage immediately," declared that France was prepared "to resume liberty of action with regard to Spain."

The government was authoritatively described as "discouraged" over international "hands off" efforts.

It was said authoritatively that the Blum government had not for a moment relaxed its admitted sympathy with the Socialist government of Spain.

The belief grew that a deliberate attempt was being made to slow up London neutrality efforts to favor maneuvers of the Spanish Fascist generalmissimo, Francisco Franco.

France was concerned by reports that 12,000 Italian troops had been landed at Cadiz before the successful Fascist assault on Malaga last week-end.

Madrid Strengthens Lines.

Madrid, Feb. 11 (U.P.).—Heavy fighting broke out late tonight around the shell-smashed buildings of University City and in Madrid's West Park sector. Reinforcements were rushed to loyalist lines along the Manzanares River.

Apparently Gen. Francisco Franco's rebels were attempting to recapture the strategic park, seized from them in a fierce battle earlier in the day.

Bitter fighting was reported around Malaga, with the Loyalists taking up new defense positions around Mejas, a mountain town 8 miles north of Malaga.

Rumanian Fascists Parade.

Bucharest, Rumania, Feb. 11 (A.P.). More than 10,000 persons paraded for two hours through Bucharest's streets today in tribute to two members of the banned Fascist Iron Guard who were killed fighting with Spanish insurgents.

Police did not interfere with the parade, which Guardists called a "Nazi demonstration."

Insulin Restores Sanity of 2, Report

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 11 (A.P.).—Dr. John B. Plastino, Spokane physician, announced tonight he had "restored to sanity" two dementia praecox patients by administering insulin.

"The immediate results are astounding, but only time will tell as to the permanency," Dr. Plastino said.

The insulin specialist said he used a treatment discovered by Dr. Manfred Sakel, of Austria.

Sues Paul Whiteman

RAMONA DAVIES, pianist and singer, better known to radio audiences as "Ramona," charged Paul Whiteman, orchestra leader, has "practically sold her down the river" when she sought an injunction yesterday to prevent him from enforcing his contract with her.

First Lady to Join Civic Discussion

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today will attend the business meeting of officers, directors and advisory council members of the American Planning and Civic Association.

The First Lady has been on the association board for eight years and has actively participated in its affairs. The meeting, to be held at the Union Trust Building offices, will consider housing, planning education, roadside improvement and other subjects.

Proposals of the president's committee on administrative management also will be discussed, as well as plans for the association's Detroit conference in June.

Frederic A. Delano, will preside. He and the directors will be hosts at a dinner at the Willard tonight in honor of the National Resources Committee.

Britain Plans Defense Loan Of Two Billions

French Cabinet Is Called; May Take Action in Spanish War.

be expended within five years and will be redeemed within 30 years. He declared the government soon will introduce a bill to obtain the general power to borrow money or to use surpluses for defense.

Loan Barred in U. S.

The chancellor of the exchequer made no statement on where the money would be sought. Authoritative sources said it could not be borrowed in the United States because the Johnson act forbids American loans to nations which have defaulted on war debt payments, and Britain is one of these.

Speculation arose over whether Chamberlain's announcement was timed to coincide with a visit by German Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop to Viscount Halifax, the lord privy seal, to make Germany's formal demand for restoration of the colonies she lost in the World War.

Viscount Halifax, acting as foreign secretary in the absence of Anthony Eden, who is holidaying on the Riviera, talked with the German ambassador for two hours. Von Ribbentrop would say nothing afterwards.

Observers pointed out that both Britain and France often have said a general European settlement must precede any colonial concessions to Germany.

Loan Debate Wednesday.

Debate on the defense loan was set for Wednesday. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin indicated the government might issue a "white paper" giving fuller information to meet a demand from the Laborite spokesman in the House, Clement R. Attlee.

Attlee called the announcement by Chamberlain "a proposal which is quite unprecedented in time of peace."

The chancellor of the exchequer, outlining the loan plan, told the members of the House:

"Flexibility and adaptation to changing circumstances of the times mut be the essence of our program.

"The general experience of the last 12 months has in no way relieved the urgency of our heavy task, nor lightened the cost of raising our forces to the proper standard of defensive strength."

Hoare Calls Loan "Inevitable."

Birmingham, England, Feb. 11 (A.P.).—Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, in a speech tonight invited nations of the world to take careful notice of Great Britain's huge defense loan announced today by Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain.

"We don't like loans of this kind," he told the Birmingham Conservative Club, "but in the present circumstances loans are inevitable. Let the countries of the world mark the determined effort we are making to put our defenses in order and let them remember that when once we've put our hands to a great task we are willing to make great sacrifices."

Sir Samuel said British disarmament of recent years had proved that weakness in Great Britain meant confusion in Europe and the remainder of the world.

Several Large Donations Made to Red Cross. Midwest Fund.

The Nation-wide drive of the the relief of flood sufferers in the devastated Ohio and Mississippi River valleys reached a total of $19,904,000 last night.

Among the latest large contributions was one of $10,527 from Generoso Pope, publisher of Progresso Italo-Americano and Corriere d'America, Italian language newspapers.

$10,686 From Puerto Rico.

From Puerto Rico came a contribution of $10,686 from the Red Cross Chapter there. Acknowledgement has been made of a gift of $250 from Ambassador Troyanovsky, of the Soviet Republic. Nelson Eddy, the movie and radio star, sent a personal contribution of $2,550 to Admiral Grayson, and the American Chamber of Commerce of the Dominican Republic sent a check for $50.

There were humble and touching contributions, too. From little Huntington, Ind., Clara June Elser sent $1.

"Grandpa gave me a dollar, and I'm sending it to you for a little girl that was in the flood," she said.

Washington Keeps Pace.

Washington kept pace with the Nation in the fund drive.

Representing the Meat Packers Union of Poland, J. Starczewski, accompanied by P. Wankowicz, counselor of the Polish Embassy, presented to the Red Cross 4,000 pounds of canned ham for distribution among the flood sufferers.

The gift was in appreciation of the assistance given by Americans when several years ago the south of Poland was undergoing a similiar catastrophe.

Contributors who sent their money in care of The Washington Post yesterday included:

Yuma Officials Move to Halt 'Degrading' Marriage Mill

Legality of Hundreds of Weddings, Including Those of Many Film Stars, Questioned as 'Greedy Officers' Are Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

Yuma, Ariz., Feb. 11.—County officials moved today to halt what they termed the "degrading practice" of courthouse marriage solicitations in this matrimonial haven for thousands of couples, among them scores of prominent movie stars.

Spurred by Superior Judge Henry C. Kelly's admonition that "carelessness in observing statutes pertaining to marriage ceremonies casts doubt on the legality of hundreds of marriages performed here," the county supervisors instructed prosecutors to seek legal means to halt marriage solicitations in the Yuma County courthouse.

Among these marriages of doubtful legality could be many performed for motion picture couples who came here to escape the three-day notice required in California.

Of the alleged solicitations, Judge Kelly wrote the supervisors:

"I call upon you to take appropriate action fully within your powers and your duties to clear away the stench thrown upon us all by the outrageous acts of derelict and greedy officers."

Judge Kelly directed the supervisors' attention to the profitable business derived by merchants and other business establishments from the many couples who come to Yuma and said:

"They are entitled to civilized and decent treatment."

The jurist asserted that in many instances marriage ceremonies were performed without the required witnesses.

"The certificates in hundreds of instances," he said, "have been signed after the event, sometimes by only one, sometimes by two persons who were not present at the ceremony.

"As a matter of fact, dereliction in failing to comply with the law requiring the presence of witnesses may raise a very serious question as to the validity of such marriages."

Following receipt of the judge's letter the board unanimously passed a resolution placing it "on record as being against any and all solicitation of marriages in the courthouse."

A companion motion, also passed without dissent, ordered the county attorney to take action to suppress the practice.

Blonde Drove Death Car, Says Detective Who Traced Trio Through Auto.

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered two youths and a golden blonde held for action of the grand jury in connection with the death of James Najjum, 54-year-old insurance collector. Police filed murder charges against the trio.

The trio picked up Najjum at the corner of M and North Capitol streets, witnesses testified, and after giving him a number of drinks, beat him and tossed him from their car after robbing him of $2.50. Najjum was attacked the night of January 20, but did not die until February 6, after two trips to Sibley Hospital.

Blonde Eunice Gerardi, 19, clad in silver fox furs, told the coroner's jury she was a former waitress. She then admitted driving her sweetheart's car on the death ride. She lives at 514 Kennedy street northwest.

Her sweetheart with whom she has been "going" a year, is Lawrence Ricker, 24, chauffeur, a married man separated from his wife. Ricker was said by detectives to have blamed his pal, Robert Meinzer, 23, of 3107 Seventeenth street northeast, of actually beating Najjum.

After being bound over to the grand jury, police moved the trio to precinct stations and then took them to headquarters to be placed in a line-up where various robbery victims last night attempted to identify them in other crimes. At the same time police arrested as a material witness, Morris Wolf, 1251 I street northwest, who was with the trio at the time Najjum was picked up, but who left before the robbery.

Detective Sergeant Aubrey Tolson quoted from statements given him by the three accused, describing the course of events leading up to Najjum's beating. Tolson said that Ricker picked up the blonde girl at her home, drove her to a spaghetti house, met Mienzer and Wolf. After a few drinks Tolson asserted that the three set forth in their cars in a drive about the city. He continued:

"They stopped at a red light at the corner of North Capitol and M streets and there saw Najjum leaning against a tree box. Najjum was staggering. They got him into one car and drove to a liquor store and purchased a pint of liquor with Najjum's money. All then got into Ricker's car (leaving Mienzer's car behind) and drove Wolf home.

"After buying gasoline on Bennings road, Ricker says Mienzer began beating Najjum in the face with his fists. Ricker and Mienzer were in the back seat with Najjum between them and the girl driving.

"They went through his pockets. At the side of the road on North Capitol street, they tell me they threw him out into the rain.

President Signs Flood Loan Bill Of $20,000,000

Measure to Aid Victims Passes Both Houses in Quick Order.

Congress hustled to President Roosevelt yesterday a bill to create a $20,000,000 Government corporation for making loans to victims of the Ohio and Mississippi floods, and the President signed the measure later during the night.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, co-author of the measure, said the President planned to sign it tonight. The bill was introduced only yesterday by Barkley and Senator Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio.

The Government loans would be limited to sufferers from flood and other disasters in 1937. The measure was designed to provide a source of credit for those unable to meet collateral requirements of other Government and private lending agencies. The Disaster Loan Corporation would function as a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which would provide the capital.

The bill was reported favorably by the Senate Banking committee this morning, passed by the Senate without dissent and sent to the House.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, meanwhile told reporters the floods probably would hamper his plan to reduce WPA rolls by 600,000 by the end of the fiscal year, and said State administrators from flood areas would join in executive sessions at Chicago tomorrow and Saturday to discuss the program in drought and flood areas.

Army engineers said they have all the basic data needed for a comprehensive national flood control project. Unofficial estimates placed the cost at $1,500,000,000 over a 10-year period.

Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of engineers, said information assembled in the last nine years at a cost of $11,000,000 would enable him to submit such a program within a few days.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presented the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb) in the chamber music auditorium Thursday afternoon. Program: Quartet in G, K. V. 387 (Mozart), Trio No. 1, Op. 34 (Paul Hindemith), Quartet No. 5 (Quincy Porter).

At this second concert in the current series, the Coolidge Quartet gave a suave and ingratiating performance of the Mozart quartet in G major, the first of the set dedicated to Haydn. Since this music was written in 1782, the ear has been educated to such tolerance that it is well-nigh impossible for us to believe that Mozart's contemporaries were astonished and even shocked by it. So orderly does it run and so inevitable are the harmonic progressions that we cannot understand why one princely amateur of that distant day should have torn up the parts in a rage at their dissonances.

Under the polished gallantry of the style, the G major quartet reveals a seriousness of purpose that marks Mozart's entry into full artistic maturity. A new exaltation of spirit speaks in the lovely andante cantabile movement, which pertains to the same plane as Beethoven's later works. The gaiety of the finale sparkles over an almost Puritanically severe counterpoint.

From the serenities of Mozart, the program leaped into the troubled tonalities of the twentieth century. One surmises that the presence of Paul Hindemith's first trio (and of two other works of his on later programs in the series) is intended as a complimentary fanfare to the composer, who is to appear at the chamber music festival in April. If so, the intention is helpful as well, for Hindemith's idiom is still unfamiliar.

There have been so few opportunities to hear his music in this country that one has to guess at the development that has been going on in his harmonic system. He has been working lately toward more definite tonal centers, as in "Mathis der Maler," for example. The trio played yesterday is 12 years old, and represents a stage of angular incidence that seems purely arbitrary. Difficult as the music is to follow harmonically, it nevertheless provides points of orientation for the ear so that one is not completely without a sense of direction.

In the toccata and the fugue one notes expert workmanship which aims at perfection of form. Within that form, however, are many whirling vortices, and the greater part of the trio is impetuous and energized music, more nervous than emotional. The third movement, although not labeled a scherzo, has a prankish humor which darts hither and yon and mockingly departs in a bumble-bee flight of the violoncello.

Summoned from the audience, Quincy Porter thanked William Kroll for the performance of his fifth quartet, as well he might, for the reading was intelligent and vital. Another hearing of this work enhances one's admiration for its firm structure and sensitive texture. Mr. Porter's tonal centers are never in doubt, nor is his affiliation with the finest subtleties of phrasing.

Flood Passes Memphis; Hits Record Height

Levee Line Holding as Crest Approaches Helena, Ark.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 11 (AP).—The crest of the Mississippi River's flood neared Helena, Ark., tonight, the level there reaching 60.25 feet, but the levee line was reported holding along the entire front and no new danger was anticipated.

The flood crest, in passing Chickasaw Bluffs guarding Memphis' business district from the ravages of the muddy stream, established a record height—more than 3 feet above the level of the 1913 waters and still higher than the stages reached in 1927.

"There are no critical points at this time," said Lieut. Col. Eugene Reybold, district engineer. "Levees throughout the district remain in good shape."

The flood left behind 460 known dead and property damage estimated at a half billion dollars.

More than 1,000,000 persons were left homeless by the turbulent waters which swept the Ohio Valley and carried destruction on into hte fertile Mississippi Valley.

D. C. Reformatory Needs 125 Guards

Capt. M. M. Barnard, retiring superintendent of District penal institutions, yesterday advised Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, that 125 additional guards will be required at the District Reformatory when the "Walled prison" is used.

"We have neither sufficient housing, educational, industrial or hospital facilities, nor sufficient guard force, to make possible either proper working of our inmates or proper custody," Barnard said in his report.

Policeman Is Injured By Hit-Run Autoist

Policeman Lenwood W. Kelly, of the Twelfth Precinct, suffered a sprained left shoulder and right leg late yesterday when he was struck by the automobile of a hit-and-run driver at New Jesey avenue and Quander street southeast.

Kelly, who is 38, and lives 1000 Ninth street southeast, was on his way home at the time of the accident. He was taken to Providence Hospital. Police searched for four colored men alleged to have been in the car. They found the automobile abandoned last night.

Cooper Is Kept Grounded Until Shooting Stops

Then He Will Go Shooting Coyotes From Cockpit of Open Plane.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Feb. 11.—Gangling Gary Cooper filed his yen for aerial coyote hunting under "unfinished business," after shuddering producers grounded him for duration of his current picture.

Cooper, who has experienced all kinds of shooting possible from the ground, has long nursed an ambition to hedge-hop after old man coyote, banging away with a swivel-mounted shotgun.

A golden opportunity seemed to offer when Robert Cummings, working with him in "Souls at Sea," offered to pilot the expedition, and the two were shopping for a slow, open-cockpit, pusher plane, when panicky Paramounters tossed in a veto.

Is Hazardous Business.

The hunt was to have been staged over desert country southeast of San Bernardino. Gunner Cooper planned to do his shooting from the forward cockpit in the nose of the plane, while Cummings piloted from the No. 2 place, in front of the rear-mounted propeller.

Technique of sky-hunting calls for the pilot to fly high until a coyote is spotted, when he dives as close to the ground as possible to give the gunner a shot.

Thereafter it's all fence jumping and wing-scraping banks until the coyote escapes or the gunner salts him down with buckshot.

Cooper says he may try it later in Texas or Montana, but that he has shelved the idea for the present. After "Souls" washes up he'll go to New York for a brief vacation before starting B. P. Schulberg's "What Ho."

Bing Awaits Blessed Events.

Bing Crosby, crooning horse-racer and prizefighter fancier, hovers near the telephone every working hour as eight births are expected in the equine maternity ward of his rancho, Santa Fe, near San Diego.

Foals are all of first-rate breeding, the crooner says, and he'll name them all for the 1940 Kentucky Derby at birth. To become Derby candidates the youngsters must be entered before they are 12 days old.

Lining up a classy combination of youth and age, Universal has signed white-haired Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Philharmonic Orchestra, for a top part in 14-year-old Deanna Durbin's next picture, "100 Men and a Girl." Stokowski broke into celluloid in "Big Broadway of 1936." He's already signed for this year's "Big Broadcast," and will also compose for Paramount.

Tallulah Bankhead Turns Over the Sum of $2,500 To Red Cross Relief Fund From Yesterday's Benefit

THE Red Cross Relief Fund benefit, presented by Tallulah Bankhead in George Kelly's new comedy of "Reflected Glory," at the National Theater yesterday afternoon, was a conspicuous success.

Dropping into the theater at the end of the second act, it was gratifying to note that a large audience was in attendance and that feminine attendants in Red Cross uniforms were doing a flourishing business in the sale of souvenir programs of the occasion.

BELL.

After the conclusion of the second act, Miss Bankhead presented a check to Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, wife of the president of the Red Cross, for a sum which I am led to believe closely approximated $2,500.

This aid to the flood relief being conducted by the Red Cross was Miss Bankhead's own idea. She suggested the extra matinee, in the face of a full calendar of professional and social engagements, and went through with it like the distinguished "trouper" she is.

I congratulate all concerned, including Edmund Plohn, manager of the National, and Company Manager Peter Davis, upon the success of this charitable enterprise.

The Croix de Guerre, with a handful of palms, of course, goes to Miss Bankhead.

Speaking of the National, the Theater Guild of New York finally seems to have made up its mind. Its final subscription play of the season, at the National, seems at last to have been given an ultimate and permanent name. Known first as "Storm in a Teacup," it then became known as "Storm Over Backie"—whatever that might mean—and now bears the title of "Storm Over Patsy." This is said to be the Guild's last guess at a suitable title for their new play, but one may never be sure about these things. By the time it gets here on Monday, March 1, it is as apt as not to be called "Storm Over What to Call This Thing!"

On two occasions, we are reminded, the statement appeared here that Lillian Gish was making her first stage appearance in Washington in the role of Ophelia, with John Gielgud in "Hamlet." Had we been possessed of a memory instead of a forgetter, we should have known better.

Miss Gish was a member of the cast of "The Good Little Devil," with Mary Pickford, Ernest Truex and William Norris, as far back as 1913, when it played the National. She appeared in the role of Marganie. I tried to alibi myself with the suggestion that it probably was Dorothy Gish, but no dice.

Peculiar that this should have happened, too, because when Ernest Truex was here in "Frederika," at the National recently, he and I went back to "The Good Little Devil," "The Dummy," "Very Good Eddie" and numerous others of his early vehicles and discussed them at some length. The name of Lillian Gish just happened not to be mentioned.

Well, that's the way it goes when the old paresis sets in!

Yesterday morning at 10 in the auditorium of the National Press Club the Washington Chapter of the American Society of Magicians hurled a matutinal party in honor of Le Paul, the skillful prestidigitator who appeared on the stage of the Earle Theater last week. Coming at the wrong hour and on the wrong day of the week, an invitation from Harry Baker, manager of the Wilson Line in Washington and a magician of no mean caliber on his own account, had reluctantly to be declined. Then later on in the day there was the screening of "Green Light" in the private projection room of the Warners in the Earle Theater Building. I am indebted to Zone Manager John J. Payette for a copy of the published novel from which the film is adapted, which as yet I have had no opportunity to read. Probably I will have skimmed through it before the picture opens on the Earle screen, next Friday, February 19.

Along with "Green Light," at the Earle the week of the nineteenth, as we have just remarked, will return to Washington, as stage headliner, one of the most ridiculous zanies we know—a very elegant fellow, by the name of Roscoe Ates.

Roscoe is the prize stutterer—or perhaps you prefer stammerer—of the films, the stage and the entire universe, if that is not taking in too much territory. He was seen in many amusing pictures when the sound screen was in its infancy, but, of late, seems not to have been so prevalent. I believe the last time he was here was with that fabulous "Moulin Rouge" caravan that was snowed out by a blizzard and barely reached town in time to put on their midnight show at the Palace. Roscoe had been here prior to that as a stage headliner at the Earle, to which he now returns.

I shall never forget that midnight show. There were a host of cinema notables in it, but Roscoe stole it. Anna Q. Nilsson, Jack Mulhall, Ben Turpin, Mary Carlisle, Dorothy Dunbar, former wife of Max Baer; Gareth Hughes and all the rest had their fans in the audience that night, but it was Roscoe Ates who came out, borrowed a violin from the orchestra pit, and slayed the customers in its tracks.

It will be fun to have the old boy back again.

It is interesting to learn directly from him that Keenan Wynn, son of Ed Wynn, the noted comedian, and grandson of Frank Keenan, noted American actor, has been propositioned by the National Broadcasting Co. for a national hook-up on the 15-minute interview we put on over WOL with members of the cast of "Hey Diddle Diddle." I hope he clicks. A grand kid.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 11.—I can think of lots of things I prefer doing with my money than opening a restaurant in Hollywood. There is a hit-or-miss business if ever one was. New local cafes open like hurricanes — and end up whispering breezes. Premiere night, film celebrities and tourists come in full gallop. But since one opening simply attracts the stars from some other restaurant, the luckless spot that thus loses its patronage usually dies a sudden death.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN.

In most communities, three years of steady service is basis for an "old established" reputation, and a cafe that has endured for so long a period generally stays put. But three years in Hollywood mean nothing. The famous old Montmartre stood customers in line for five years, then folded in three months. Henry's, reportedly backed by Charlie Chaplin, was equally popular for four years. No Hollywood evening was complete without a stopover at Henry's. But in a single month, the intake dropped from sixty thousand to four. Curtains!

The star trend spells success or failure for a local cafe. Where go the stars, there go the bulk customers. Recognizing this fact, owners of newly opened eating places connive valiantly to entice the picture names. Clever press agents noise it about that "Garbo drops in for dinner" (you know it is not true). That is called "star bait," and how the public falls for it! But woe to the restaurant that opens its doors to a starless attendance; it has less chance of success than a Republican in Mississippi. Equal woe to the cafe that cannot hold its movie trade, for it, too, is doomed to fail.

I am a sucker for a pun. Maybe that is why local gangsters, good or bad, use me for a chopping block. This one cracked by Michael Whalen as he farewelled Sonja (pronounced Sawn-ya) Henie may also make you laugh. "Good-by, Miss Henie," he said, "I'm glad to have Sonja."

Proprietors of several exclusive hat shops have recently been nonplussed because their very latest models were being copied almost before they reached the show window. Detectives were put to work, and a plainclothes man discovered the chiseler operating from a small office facing two millinery shops. Using a telescope on the $60 numbers, he was sketching them. From his drawings a cheap shop was reproducing, to sell for $4 or $5, the same chapeau for which a Crawford or Harlow was paying $60. He was arrested, and thus another boulevard racket came to an end. But there will be others to replace it.

Oh, yes, before I forget! More about a Hollywood cafe. It is La Golandrina (The Dove), a unique Mexican restaurant located in the wine cellar of the oldest house in Los Angeles on Olvera street.

Opening night, a procession from the nearby Mexican church, marched to this posada. Heading the parade was a lovable old Catholic priest, and behind him walked scores of men, women and children, all bearing lighted candles and singing hymns. The priest sprinkled Holy Water over the tables.

But being quite some distance from Hollywood, the new owner decided a bit of extra precaution might not be amiss. So, near the door he hung a sign bearing the names of patron saints of the cafe. Heading the list are Dolores Del Rio and Ramon Novarro. And do the tourists flock in!

RACKET: Cartier's, in London, was victimized recently in this manner: A distinguished-looking gentleman entered the store, intent upon buying a rare jewel for his wife. "It must be something rare," he stated, "no matter the price." A single pearl, costing $70,000, was shown him. He purchased it and paid by banknote . . . Two weeks later he entered Cartier's again, informed that his wife wanted another pearl like it—for a pair of earrings. No matter the price, he must have a mate to that pearl . . . Agents were sent scurrying and found that mate in a Dutch farmhouse. The owner refused to sell—for less than $120,000. The jewelers told their customer he'd have to pay cost, plus 10 per cent, and he agreed. Cartier's paid the $120,000. The customer disappeared, pocketing the $50,000 profit he made from reselling the same pearl.

AGE: At the New Amsterdam Roof the other night Hildegarde broadcast with Ed Wynn's program. After the broadcast Wynn spoke of Hildegarde to the studio audience and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, here is a young American girl who was the toast of every smart Continental spot last season—a young girl who captured the imagination of every crowned head in Europe and now engaged to sing for the Coronation. She's only a kid—in her 'teens' . . . The audience applauded, and Wynn Called Hildegarde from the wings. "C'mon," he urged, "how old are you? Tell 'em" . . . The young lady, with all nonchalance, answered: "Twenty-four!"

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

By Alice Hughes.
New York, Feb. 11.

IT ISN'T OFTEN we get a real live lady evangelist in this town to do battle with our stupendous forces of worldliness and sin. We're a pretty big job for any evangelist to tackle, let alone what was once called the "weaker vessel."

ALICE HUGHES.

In the old days we had the beautiful Rheba Crawford spreading the message from the back steps of the old Gaiety Theater, and now and again young Uldine Utley drops in. Sister Aimee MacPherson never did very well among us, though she has given the local devil's tail a tweak or two in her time.

Right now, however, we've got a lady evangelist spreading the good word among us, and not a rock's toss from Times Square. She's a Polish girl named Alexandria Wasilewski, blonde and pretty, and went to school right here across the East River in Brooklyn.

What gives a filip to the case of Sister Wasilewski is the fact that eight years ago, as Alice Hayes, she was a dancer in that big revue called "George White's Scandals." But while awaiting a rehearsal call, she dropped into the Brooklyn tent where the lovely Utley girl was lashing out at Satan, and at once embraced a better life.

Now, after eight years, she's doing her work on West Forty-third street, practically across the street from the historic Apollo Theater, where Mr. White's girls pranced and sang in the old days. Quite a little drama, from any point of view, and I'm sure we all wish Sister Wasilewski lots of penitents on the sawdust trail. Believe me, that's a great area for candidates!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—That beautiful Enzo Fiermonte, the prize fighter who married Madeleine Force Astor some time ago, and so became young John Jacob Astor's step-pappy, has been seen in his local haunts during the past season with a remarkably handsome black eye. His remarks of "taxicab door" were greeted with wholesale derision—naturally. Ever hear of anybody getting away with that door stuff, even when it's true? . . . .

Hundreds of the girls finally gave up the ski notion in disgust, after weeks of waiting for the darned stuff that never came. However, a great Avenue beautician has installed a ski exercise machine, said to be the only one of its kind in the country—you just lean forward and don't go anywhere. I suppose for five bucks extra you can get an attendant to douse you with shaved ice, and perhaps crack you over the derriere with a barrel stave . . .

• • • •

A couple of my Brooklyn friends, Clara and Paul Hayden, began getting those flowery compliments on their Hollandaise sauce. You know—"Really, dear, you should put the stuff up; it's that marvelous!" Which is precisely what they're doing. Now let the company buy it!

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

PATTERN 287

"SEE my new frock—isn't it cute?" asks this adorable Two-to-Ten. And no wonder this fashion-conscious kiddie is proud of Pattern 287, for it's the most becoming frock in her wardrobe. She's especially fond of its unusual yoke that's cut in one with a fetching front panel, dainty puffed or flared sleeves and an adjustable belt that's tied in a jiffy. Too, a pattern for roomy, elastic-topped panties is included with this easy-to-make dress pattern, and any mother will realize what practical assets they are. A grand style made up in bright figured challis or dainty dimity. Detailed sewing guide accompanies this pattern.

Pattern 287 is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 requires 2⅛ yards 36-inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (preferably coins) for this pattern. Write clearly size, name, address and style number. Send orders to The Washington Post Pattern department, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Lacy Collars Herald Spring

Now is the time to freshen up the winter wardrobe by means of the new frilly, feminine neckwear. A collar bears the definite label of spring if it is enormous in sizes, very fragile and lacy and features what is called the "high-low" neckline. The square collar of embroidered batiste and lace shown above meets all these requirements. It is ideal for dressing up the short-sleeved dark winter frock or for wear with the new spring dresses.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'Satisfactory Alliance With Congenial Man' Is Aim of 'Fairly Attractive' Girl of 26.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 26, considered fairly attractive, possess an average amount of social graces, am well read and fond of dancing and all outdoor sports and yet somehow I do not seem able to form a satisfactory alliance with a congenial man. I have come to the conclusion that either there is a scarcity of eligible young men in this city or I am not in a position to meet them. Since I am working for a moderate salary and almost entirely self-supporting, I do not have much money to spend on recreation, yet I feel the need of it strongly.

• • • •

Maybe I am too particular, but I cannot interest myself seriously in the average callow youth, barely able to take care of himself and lacking the mature judgment I so much admire in men. Yet, curiously enough, that is the type of man I invariably attract, although there have been a few instances where I found friendship with men of 40 or over, but they seemed a bit too old for me.

• • • •

So, Miss Haworth, how can I find the happy medium? A person a few years older than I, and one somewhat reserved, preferably in an established business or career? Perhaps I am asking too much, yet I cannot be satisfied as I am, and before I am too old I should like a chance to make something of life to compensate for the unhappiness of my past. You may be able to tell me what is wrong with myself or my methods, that they do not yield me anything more than restlessness and a depressing sense of futility. And may I assure you that I am not afraid of constructive criticism? DIANA.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DIANA: It would appear that you are asking for more than you are able to command, and that you are not actually making the effort to locate yourself in happier hunting grounds. If increased social opportunities depend on having more money to spend for recreation and self-improvement, it is up to you to provide yourself with a better salary—either through doing more outstanding work where you are, so that advancement is inevitable, or by finding a job with a better paying corporation, institution or employer.

• • • •

Try to find a job which will bring you in contact with eligible bachelors around 30, well established in business or the professions. Try to promote yourself out of the "fairly attractive" class into the definitely attractive category, by doing clever and interesting things with your hair, eyes, complexion and dress; and make the most of what social graces you have, so that in these things you will be superior, rather than average.

• • • •

Don't disdain the callow youths and men of 40 who pay you court. It is quite possible they might one day introduce you to the very bachelor you're looking for, and if you're looking bright and interesting and smartly dressed—instead of bored and indifferent and a trifle dowdy—the bachelor may give you that rush you dream of. If you can't find the ideal man after a reasonable period of looking, I would advise you to settle on the most promising of the callow youths around your own age, and skillfully mold him into the pattern you admire.

• • • •

Many a callow youth, barely able to take care of himself and lacking mature judgment at the time, has been taken in hand by an intelligent, ambitious woman and virtually pushed to the top of the ladder of success. If you have some maturity of mind and tastes, you should be able gradually to impart these qualities, over a period of time, to a deeply devoted youthful admirer. Men need admiration, encouragement and inspiration in order to make progress socially and professionally, and you should be able to convince a fairly intelligent beau that he is deserving of and capable of better things than a bare existence. Such a conviction is always the keystone of individual success.

• • • •

The principal thing wrong with you is that you are expecting someone else to compensate for your own shortcomings; for you admit you are only average, and yet you would like to win the love of a superlatively eligible bachelor. And the main thing wrong with your approach is the lack of it. You aren't doing anything much but wishing.
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Red Roses Popular As Valentine Gifts

Heart-Shaped Corsage of Violets Suitable for Parties.

Cut flowers and corsages of every kind have long been popular Valentine expressions. Probably the most traditional expression of this type is a bouquet of red roses, which are popularly thought to be, and certainly are an appropriate token of true affection. On the other hand, there are a dozen or more other flowers which can be given for this occasion, and many of them will be better appreciated because they are more useful. This is especially true of flowers in pink and yellow colors which are more easily worn or used to decorate the home.

This heart-shaped corsage of violets is most appropriate for the Valentine dance or party. The violets harmonize well with most gowns and are particularly lovely on white materials such as the brocade shown in the illustration.

Flower stylists announce that corsages of spicy carnations will be very popular this year. While the red blooms will be in great favor, the white, light or dark pink, yellow or the new carnations with candy stripes will be preferred by many.

Valentine Envelopes.

The smart 1937 Valentine missives, whether elaborately formal or whimiscally comic, travel this year in white envelopes—and unlined. Very occasionally a pastel-colored envelope in one of the new delicate shades is used to carry out the color of the card within, but that's just the striking exception that proves the rule. Otherwise the only variations from the rule of white are the off-white shades of ivory, deep cream, and natural parchment.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Relax and Lower Blood Pressure.

High blood pressure is as harmful to the human family as cancer, inasmuch as it is responsible for as many deaths each year. In addition it is efficiency destroying, and a common outcome—apoplexy—occurs all too often.

What is the cause? Heretofore we have blamed the diet, particularly the eating of meat, the metabolic mechanism, the processes of digestion, some failure in fat absorption, and various chemicals such as common salt. Since it is associated frequently with obesity, overeating has been considered an important contributing force. Other than the last named, most of these elements have been shown to have but little effect.

One Type Hereditary.

We know that there is a type of hypertension [high blood pressure] that is hereditary. By this we mean that the tendencies which bring on the condition depend upon the weight, the build and the size of the arteries—factors which are transmitted by the parents. Studies of the ductless glands—thyroid, pituitary, adrenals, etc.—have shown that the antics of these dynamos may serve to upset the sympathetic nervous system and thus bring about undue narrowing or contraction of the skin capillaries. But even these powerful secretions—alone—cannot explain the phenomenon.

The role of the emotions has been investigated also, and here we find some positive clews. Most of us recognize that under stress, strain, or excitement the systolic pressure may rise from 20 to 50 points or more. Nerves that are as taut as delicate piano wires may respond in a striking manner to but slight stimuli. They may carry the message of tenseness, worry, or excess fatigue to the blood vessels, which will contract promptly and raise the pressure level.

While every one will be impressed in some degree by excitement, yet the one who is likely to develop high blood pressure in later life will react excessively. Little reliance can be placed on the outward appearance or behavior of the individual. It is what goes on within that counts. Those with what is called essential hypertension may show a rise of 50 points or more under stimulation.

Treat Nervous System.

Should blood pressure be treated, and if so, how? The best remedy is that which is directed toward the nervous system and in many cases small doses of bromides will prove salutary. The raw edge of nervous irritability is thus honed away, and sooner or later the patient is able to gain control of a mechanism that has been running wild. Even for such symptoms as headache, dizziness, breathlessness and excessive fatigue, quiet and rest plus some mild sedative may be all that is needed.

Recent experimental evidence has shown that the sulphocyanates will give beneficial results if used with great caution. We must recall, however, that we are dealing with a poisonous drug, one that can manifest its toxic effects quickly. But even the cyanates are not curative. They will reduce the pressure in many instances and as long as their administration is maintained will prove of value.

The remedy par excellence lies in the conquest of oneself—the control of the emotions, the avoidance of overfatigue, and of worry. Rest and relaxation are essential. But some will declare that they cannot relax and that they are now resting all that is possible. Surely, with a careful reorganization of one's daily program, an hour or two of additional sleep can be secured.

The wisest philosophy is that of "carry on," saving energy in every instance in which the expenditure of vital force is unnecessary or unprofitable.

Tact Required In Criticizing Child for Acts

Stress Should Be Placed on Good Qualities by Parents.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

VIRGINIA was a nail-biter. Her mother tried by every known means to break the child of the habit, but without success. At 14 Virginia was still biting her nails. Finally in exasperation her mother one day exclaimed, "It does no good to give you pretty clothes and dress you up. Your hands are disgusting and spoil the whole effect!"

Perhaps she hoped by so extreme a statement to shame the child into letting her nails grow. If so, she made a mistake. Virginia continued to bite her nails, and all that her mother's rather brutal remark did was to make her self-conscious and awkward in company. She invented a way of folding her hands in such manner that no nails showed, and when her hands were idle they were always curled one about the other in a little ball.

Personal remarks are odious even to one's own daughter or son. Sometimes, of course, they are unavoidable, but they should always be made with the same tact and consideration with which they would be made to a person of one's own age and an outsider.

No child wants to bite his nails, or indeed to have any personal idiosyncrasies which make him different from others. The boy or girl with a poor skin or slinky, oily hair, or an impediment of speech, daily goes through agonies of shame. There is no need to intensify this shame by comment.

What these children need is help, not criticism. Mary will tend her hair, John will give up sweets, Virginia will stop her nail-biting, Sam may even stutter less, if their attention is turned toward their strong points instead of their weak ones.

Valentine Decorations Are Easy to Make, And Give Romantic Atmosphere to Table

WITH St. Valentine's Day close at hand, you may be planning a Valentine party or at least you will have something just a little extra for dinner on Sunday.

A Valentine centerpiece is appropriate, no matter what the occasion. Heart decorations are always trumps. A coy lass and her swain, surrounded by heart-shaped pillows of red cellophane, bring the traditional romance to the table. The heads are made of clear film with appliqued features of red and black transparent film and the lacy ruffles, a circular ruff for the girl and a jabot for the boy, are fashioned from transparent paper doilies.

Silver Paper Used.

Silver paper is used for the hats and the cardboard foundation of the centerpiece. Part of the maiden's charm is her long curls fashioned from tubes of clear film crinkled on a pencil. The boy's hair is of black paper.

To make the heads, cut a No. 15 wire 18 inches long and bend one end to a 1-inch hook. Crush clear film and wind it around the hook to form a 3½-inch ball. Cut another strip 6 inches by 22 inches and wind it twice around the ball, securing with cellophane type. Gather the film together at top and bottom and tie with spool wire.

The brim of the girl's hat is cut from a 6-inch circle of silver paper and the crown is of red film banded with red transparent ribbon edged with silver. For the boy's hat, cut the brim 5 inches by 6 inches in oval shape and make the crown high like a top hat. His jabot is made from two 8-inch doilies of lace-patterned cellophane, cut in thirds, triangular shape.

Each pillow is formed from four heart-shaped pieces of red film, cut 14 inches by 14 inches. Sew the four hearts together about 1½ inches from the edge, leaving space at the point to stuff the pillow with crushed clear film. Cover the stitches with a band of silver cellophane tape. Before inserting the head wire, cut a 1-inch cardboard circle for reinforcement, puncture it at the center, and cement to a heart 4 inches from the top dent.

To attach the girl's head, draw the wire through this puncture and then through the center of a transparent lace doily, poking the wire through the heart stuffing and bringing it out for use between the two pillows. Now wind a full-length No. 15 wire with red film, making a center loop 5 inches long and wind the wire together at this point with spool wire for 1 inch. Hold the loop behind the pillow for a brace and wind this 1-inch space to the extending pillow wire.

Attach the boy's head in similar manner, so the two figures face each other. Both wires are drawn through the cardboard base and fastened underneath with the cape.

Sell Houses

Some time ago we told you how a Post display ad sold a house for Sandoz despite the fact that it poured that Sunday. Post readers must like the rain, for we have another similar incident to report: Last Sunday Harry Wardman ran a classified house-for-sale ad in The Post. Again it rained cats and dogs, and again a number of Post readers—14 this time—hoisted their umbrellas and splashed forth to look at the house. Need we add that the house was sold that very day—two houses, in fact, for a late comer was shown another Wardman house which he decided to take.

P. S. The Post sells houses when the sun shines, too.

Here's the house that was advertised at $6,750—and sold the same day.

Maj. Milholland Holds Preliminary Casting for Horsemen Pageant to Be Staged at Ft. Myer

Elaborate Saga Planned This Year, to Be Held Early in April.

By Lynda Reeve.

The preliminary casting for "Hoof Prints—the Saga of Horsemen Through the Ages" to be staged at Fort Myer the first week in April was held yesterday morning at the Post. Young ladies of the diplomatic, official and residential sets, who had been invited to take part, met with Maj. George Milholland to discuss the program.

They assembled at the Post Theater where Capt. John Reybold, author of the scenario and designer of the costumes for the spectacle, gave to his audience a description of scenes in the pageant. Later, the group went to the Recreation Hall where parts were assigned.

For some years the Friday rides at Fort Myer have provided thrills for Washingtonians. It was in 1922, when Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, now making his home in New York, was colonel and in command of the Virginia post, that these rides grew into something more than an exhibit of military riding. Fancy costumes and clowns were added. Since then, even though the regular "rides" have continued there has sprung up the society circus. The debutantes, as well as their older and younger sisters, take part and put the Artillery and Cavalry horses through difficult paces.

Still More Elaborate.

Last year the circus took the form of a pageant, "The Winning of the West," a colorful and highly entertaining affair. This year the plans are almost completed for an even more elaborate presentation.

It opens with a parade of the entire show, later followed by individual acts. There will be Pegasus, wings and all; the Amazons—chosen from the ranks of the taller girls—astride powerful horses. Achilles and his chariot; Ghengis Khan and his followers; and the Wooden horse of Troy.

The skit depicting the Lord of Coventry and his famous wife will be one of the outstanding spots of the show. There will be the ladies-in-waiting, riding side saddle, and gentlemen of the court, all attired in regal velvets and cloth of gold. Then there will be Napoleon and his artillery with Josephine riding in a comfortable carriage.

Tandem Ride Slated.

The tandem ride of the Pages of the Court will have among its participants such skilled horsewomen as Louise Chase Myers, Miss Margaret Cotter, Miss Hebe Reynolds, Miss Gladys Marsh, Miss Elizabeth Stieg, Miss Mary Crane and Miss Ellen Bryden. No show at Fort Myer would be complete without an act by Maj. Millholland and his police dog, "Kiko," who assumes the role of a lion for the event.

The Commanding General of the Third Corps Area in Baltimore, Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, will be the guest of honor at the exhibition drill to be given this afternoon at Fort Myer. He and Mrs. Bowley will be the guests in whose honor Col. and Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright will entertain at luncheon preceding the ride. Other guests will include Maj. and Mrs. Charles Merrill, Capt. and Mrs. Haydon L. Boatner, of Baltimore, and Capt. and Mrs. Don Galloway.

Above, Miss Charlotte Hannum and Miss Mary McKim Crane listen with interest while Capt. John Reybold outlines the plot for the 1937 Society Circus—Hoof Prints, the Saga of Horsemen Through the Ages—which will be given at Fort Myer April 1, 2, 3 and 4. Capt. Reybold, having finished the scenario, is now engaged in designing costumes and selecting musical scores for each act.

Left, Miss Suzanne Wilson, daughter of the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, and Miss Helen Brereton, attractive Navy Junior, were among the members of the Capital younger set who met at the Fort Myer Theater yesterday morning to hear the plans and be given their parts in the pageant. Rehearsals and informal gatherings start next week.

Middleburg Hunt Riders in Chase

Group Runs Fox to Ground on Llewellyn Farm.

A swift-going red fox that carried the Middleburg Hunt into Piedmont and Orange County territory gave the field splendid sport for a hour and a half yesterday before he was run to ground on the Llewellyn Farm, in Piedmont territory. Hunt members met at the Pot House at 1 o'clock, and it was the first good fox hunting weather they have had for many days.

The fox was started on the Goodwin Farm, carried into Piedmont beyond Atoka, to Mrs. Rumsey's place in Orange County, and back to Piedmont. A second fox was jumped and the pack split, but the larger number of hounds kept after the first red.

Those riding were Mr. D. C. Sands, M. F. H.; Miss Constance Regan, Mr. Duncan Briggs, of Providence, R. I., a guest of the Charles Sabins; Mrs. Sabin, Louis Leith, Dr. Hatfield, a guest of Mr. Paul Mellon; Mr. Harry Worcester Smith, Mrs. W. J. Donovan, of New York; Miss Laura Sprague, Miss Frances Frick, Miss Jennie Green, Mrs. Sylvia Hazard, Mr. Jack Skinner, Mr. Turner Wiltshire, Miss Bettina Belmont and Mr. Forest Dishman.

Mr. Edwards, Miss Worrall Are Married

Rev. Warner Officiates at Wedding Service in St. Alban's.

Sisters of Bride Act as Matron of Honor and Bridesmaid.

Miss Larry Woodward Worrall, daughter of Mrs. Maria Baldwin Beard Worrall, of Washington, last evening became the bride of Mr. Walter Meayers Edwards, son of Mrs. Walter James Edwards and the late Mr. Edwards of Leigh-on-Sea, Essex, England. The ceremony was performed at St. Alban's Church by the Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector, at 8 o'clock.

Ferns and tall vases of white snapdragons and red carnations with two candelabra holding lighted tapers were used to decorate the chancel of the church. While the guests were assembling, Mr. Walter Nash, church organist, played the wedding marches. Mr. Milton Smith, of Baltimore, cousin of the bride, sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

Wears Ivory Satin Gown.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. James Edward Douglass, jr. She wore a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines. The long sleeves were fitted and pointed at the wrist and the skirt fell into a long train. Her Juliet cap was trimmed with orange blossoms and her tulle veil fell in three panels over the train, the center panel having an ivory satin lattice border matching the cap. She carried a bouquet of white roses, lillies of the valley and gardenias, and a lace handkerchief which had belonged to her great-grandmother.

Mrs. William Norman Clarke, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. She wore a chiffon gown in one of the new watermelon shades, made with a short train and jacket, and carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers and wore a spray of them in her hair.

Sister Is Bridesmaid.

Mrs. James Edward Douglass, jr., sister of the bride, and Mrs. Everett Gladstone Moore were the bridesmaids. Their gowns of French blue chiffon were similar in design to that of the matron of honor. They carried bouquets of African daisies and wore clusters of the same flowers in their hair.

Little Mary Baldwin Clarke, niece of the bride, served as flower girl and wore a long dress of ivory net over satin, with a bonnet to match. She carried a nosegay of spring flowers. Little William Norman Clarke, jr., dressed in a white suit, acted as page.

Mr. Duncan Best Man.

Mr. Edwards and his bride left later in the evening for New York on their way to Nassau for their wedding trip, the latter wearing a beige coat with fox collar over a navy blue tailored suit with matching hat and a corsage of gardenias. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards will make their home at 4707 Connecticut avenue.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Just a few scant weeks ago the Admiral was the scene of a welcoming party to Mme. Jusserand, who made her home in the historic old house when her husband was France's envoy here. Yesterday afternoon, the same great rooms were the scene of another tea party in honor of a French envoy, this time the retiring M. Andre de Laboulaye and his wife, who are too soon to leave. They had just come from the White House, where they had said their good-bys to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mme. de Laboulaye, in a black gown with a touch of blue at the neck, and the Ambassador received with Margaret Hart, president of the Newspaper Women's Club. The popular diplomatic hostess was very much surprised and delighted when 11-year-old Jean McCabe, daughter of the Clarence J. McCabes (Jean was born in France), presented her with a special edition of The Eagle's Express, the wee newspaper which this precocious youngster edits and publishes every day.

Among the guests was Representative Robert Mouton, of Louisiana, with whom the de Laboulayes visited in the South not so long ago. With him was his attractive niece, Theodora Olivier.

Among those who took their turns serving were Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Ernest Draper, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Charles White, Mrs. Leila Baton, and Mrs. Sallie V. H. Pickett.

Yesterday afternoon found a lot of us going to the flood sufferers' benefit performance of "Reflected Glory," starring Tallulah Bankhead.

The Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky, arrived early and was accompanied by Mme. Oumansky and young Oleg Troyanovsky.

The Guatemalan Minister and his wife and daughter drove up, the two feminine members of the family alighting and proceeding into the theater, while the diplomat continued doubtless, to more work at the office. Mme. Recinos' long black cloth coat was open down the front disclosing a bright blue gown, and little Laura was costumed entirely in black.

The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Close and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, arrived at the same moment, entering through different doors and came face to face inside, laughed merrily and went in together.

Saw Mrs. E. Goring Bliss looking very petite and smart in her beige outfit with a yellow scarf. Diana Rowland tall and regal in mink and a trick little black hat that had a narrow tube bow that stuck out in front. Gloria Grosvenor, now fully recovered from her automobile accident, with Suzanne Kappler hurried in just before the curtain went up.

You can't keep a good man down, and certainly not Fenton Fadeley, jr., who was painfully injured along with his famous jumper, Lacquer Lady, when the mare fell over a jump at the Inaugural Horse Show at Fort Myer. He will again be in the saddle, and widely grinning as usual at the third winter show, to be given at the Army post Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

As these shows go on they get bigger and better, until it seem that surely nothing more can be thought up to provide additional obstacles to try the mettle of horse and rider.

The judges this time will include such well known horsemen as Maj. Gen. Leon B. Kromer, Col. Adna Chaffee and Capt. Sterling Larrabee.

Mrs. Roosevelt Attends Benefit Exhibit of Art

Mrs. Roosevelt was an early arrival yesterday at the opening of the exhibit and sale of pictures and craft work being held by Washington artists. Proceeds of the exhibit, which is on view at a local department store, will go to flood refugees.

The First Lady, who wore a black broadtail coat and a black hat, was accompanied by Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury. In the absence of Miss Edith Hoyt, chairman of the exhibit, who is ill, Mrs. Roosevelt was received by Mrs. Elizabeth Graves, a prominent Washington artist, whose work is included in the exhibition.

Mrs. Roosevelt made several purchases including a water color and a little rabbit made of porcelain. Among others who visited the sale during the afternoon were Mrs. Paul Bastedo, who made several purchases; Mme. Lombard and Mrs. Sherman Miles, who are among the patronesses; Miss Marian Shouse as a representative of the Red Cross, to which the proceeds will be given and Mrs. Eugene Carusi.

Other patronesses of the sale include Lady Lindsay, Mme. Pelenyi, Princess Boncompagni and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

Diplomats Attend Mr: Youssef's Reception To Celebrate Birthday of Egyptian Monarch

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The birthday of King Farouk I was celebrated yesterday at the Egyptian Legation, where the Minister, Mr. Amine Youssef, entertained hundreds of guests at a reception from 6 to 7. Not only were practically all members of the diplomatic and official sets of Washington present, but there also were guests here from New York for the occasion.

The Minister, in the absence of Mme. Youssef, was assisted in receiving by Mme. Zoulfikar, wife of the Attache. They stood in the drawing room on the first floor, where a large portrait of the young King—done some years ago, when he was known as the boy monarch—hangs over the mantel.

Upstairs were two large salons and the dining room where a long table was set with a center bouquet of white lilies and Japanese iris and lighted with long white tapers. Through the other rooms pink roses, carnations and lavender tulips were used in large bouquets.

A tall Egytian servant, wearing his native dress of red, with voluminous trousers and a red fez, served champagne.

Friends of the minister came from New York to attend the reception. Among them were Mrs. J. F. H. Mitchell and her attractive daughter, Miss Ann Mitchell, who collaborate in writing popular music, and who are guests at the legation for a few days; Col. and Mrs. H. Murray Jacoby, Mrs. M. Bernard Philipp and Baroness von Puschenthal. Miss Mitchell wore a striking costume, a black tunic dress braided in gold around the stand-up collar and down the front, and a small round, bell-boy hat braided in the same design.

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland who, with Senator Copeland, spent part of last summer in Egypt, was among the early arrivals at the reception. The First Secretary of the Legation, Mr. Anis Azer, escorted her to the punch table. She drank a toast: "Here's to Egypt; here's to your King and to the tomb that was opened on the day of his birth." From the legation, Mrs. Copeland went to the "at home" of Mrs. Millard Tydings, and earlier in the afternoon she had attended the Red Cross benefit performance of "Reflected Glory."

Baroness von Below, who was one of those assisting at the tea table, had just come from Mrs. Tydings'. She wore a gown of silver lame and black velvet, and a corsage of orchids. Others who assisted at the tea table were Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. Clarence Grosner, Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Fred Britten and Mrs. Cabot Stevens.

Among the guests were the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Olga Patterson, and Mrs. Ernest Schlatter and Mr. Schlatter, of the Swiss Legation; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Jesse Wolcott, accompanied by her niece, Miss Fanchon Aldrich; Mrs. Ralph Church, and Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. The Minister of The Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With arrived at the same time as did the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch and the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Mme. Pastoriza, the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban and the Portuguese Minister and Mme. Bianchi.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, who is leaving tomorrow for Florida stood for a few moments in conversation with Mr. George Belicovitch whose mother, Mrs. J. J. Mack and Mr. Mack, have just purchased a house in Florida. The son of the Egyptian Minister, Mr. Mustapha Youssef, was moving from one group of guests to another, to see that all had been served or had some of the Egyptian cigarettes which were provided.

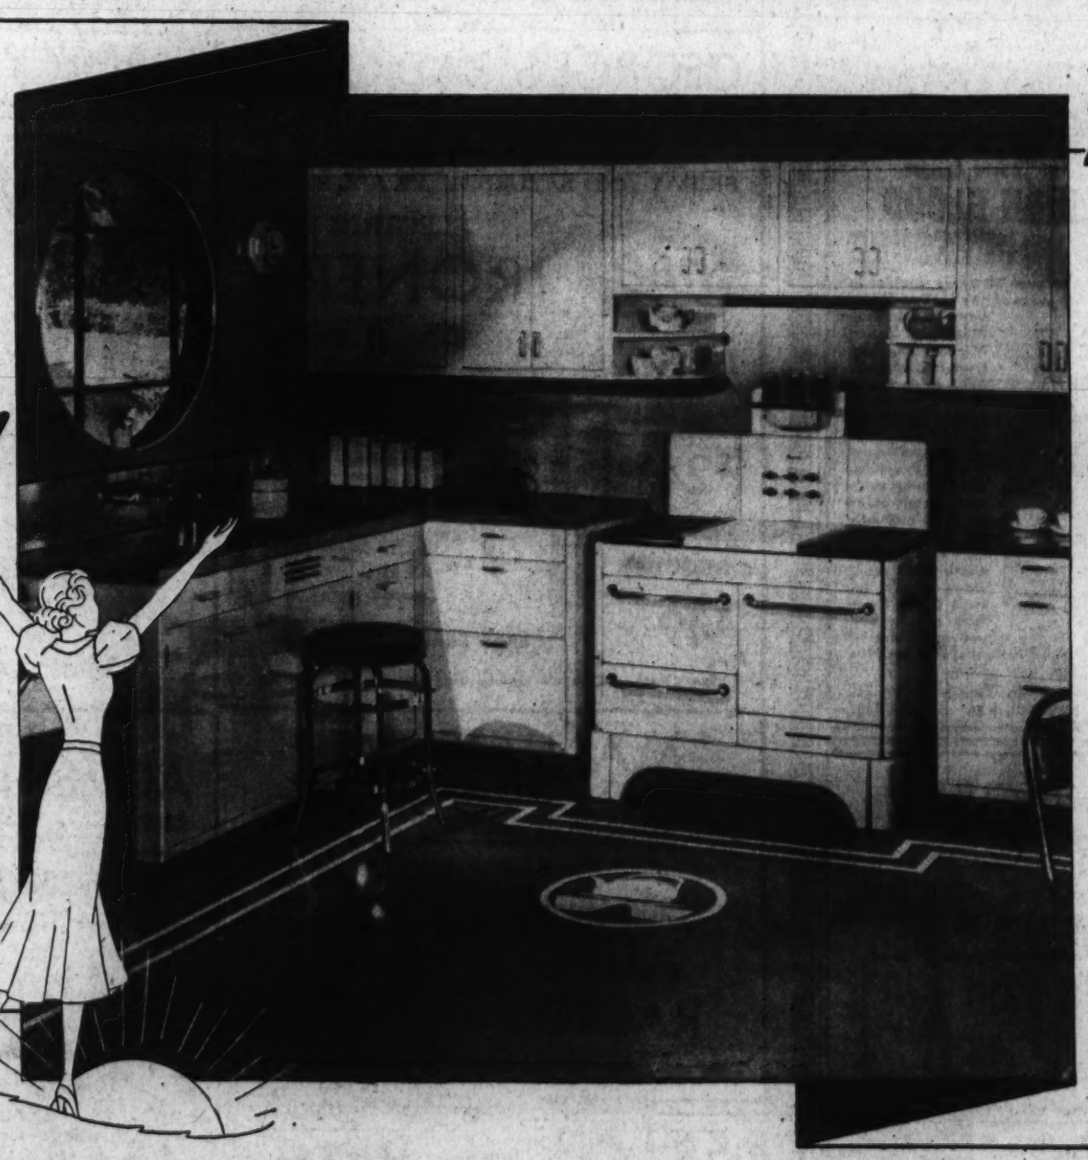
Ertegun; the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios; Miss Jane Thorpe, the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Witold Wankowicz; the Second Secretary, Mr. Edward Kulikowski, and his sister, Mme. BUILD--STEP BY STEP—A COMPLETELY AUTOMATIC GAS KITCHEN



There's nothing like gas for—

BROILING
Gas gives you the intense heat needed to brown meats so fast that loss of juices is prevented. Full flavor is saved.

ROASTING
Gas gives you the oven ventilation which produces crisp, juicy roasts. Excess moisture is allowed to escape, important to accomplish this result.

BAKING
Baking requires even heat throughout the oven and unlimited range of baking temperatures, for light, evenly browned cakes, pies, breads. Gas gives both!

FRYING
Perfect, speedy frying requires instant high heat—even spread of heat under the skillet — numberless heat variations. Gas gives all three!

BOILING
Fast! Gas brings foods to a boil in a jiffy, with no time wasted. Because of its extreme flexibility, it gives you the exact degree of heat you need.

What amazing progress has been made in kitchens these days! When you modernize your kitchen, remember this:

It's true of cooking . . . it's true of refrigeration . . . it's true of water heating.

Modern gas ranges bring you automatic heat control. New, high-speed grills that broil in practically half the time. Automatic lighting of top burners. Extra table-top space and utensil drawers.

You save hours of time. You save fuel. Cooking is easier. Foods taste better!

Gas offers equal advantages in refrigeration and water heating. It is silent, dependable. No need for attention. Low operating cost.

See the several model kitchens displayed at our showrooms. See the better results you can get, the money you can save, when you modernize your home with gas.

Plane Victims Drowned, Tests Of Experts Hint

Wealthy Magnate Struggled to Live After Crash, Says Examining Doctor.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 11.—Evidence that death overtook them as they struggled in the submerged wreckage of a skyliner came tonight from autopsy examinations of four of the 11 persons who died when the giant transport plunged into the waters of San Francisco Bay.

While four agencies dug silently into the available evidence for the crash cause, the post-mortem examinations showed all four of the victims whose bodies have been recovered thus far, were alive after the plane struck, and that at least three of them died by drowning.

Although the plane struck within a few seconds of its projected landing time, the Oakland Tribune said investigators had discovered its landing gear had not been let down to landing position, and that its wing flaps, designed to slow the landing speed, were not adjusted for that purpose.

Four Inquiries Started.

The Tribune said the investigators declined to be quoted by name. The four agencies inquiring into the disaster are the Department of Commerce, the San Mateo County coroner, William Crosby; the United Airlines, and the Douglas Aircraft Corporation, manufacturer of the plane.

Douglas Company officials in Burbank also said their investigators reported the wing flaps were not in landing position.

Investigators thus far have theorized that Pilot A. R. "Tommy" Thompson, veteran United Air Lines flier, possibly misjudged his altitude or inadvertently permitted the plane to stall, and that it struck the water at high speed and flopped over on its back.

Dr. Joseph N. Dallal said his examination of the body of Mark Fontana, San Francisco food manufacturer, revealed a terrific struggle to survive.

Struggle Indicated.

"The head was quite ruddy and the veins distended," said Dr. Dallal, "showing a desperate effort was made. Examination shows he was fully conscious—not even dazed—after the terrific impact, but as to how long he fought, I cannot say.

"There was considerable water in the lungs."

Coroner Crosby agreed with Dallal that Fontana drowned, and theorized that the manufacturer, as well as the other passengers, might have floated or fought clear of the wreck only to perish in the cold, muddy water.

Crosby also said there was no question that Thompson, Fontana and Stewardess Ruth Kimmel drowned. He was uncertain as to whether drowning caused the death of Co-pilot Joe de Cesaro. The co-pilot, he said, had internal injuries. The dead crew of three was in the plane when it was raised.

Grappling continued for the other seven victims.

HOLC Collections Reported Slipping

By the Associated Press.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation, which its director, John H. Fahey, describes as the largest home loan agency in the world, is having trouble making collections.

Out of $529,605,397 in stallments due last November 1, the corporation collected only $402,520,282, or approximately 76 per cent, one official said.

Between time of the HOLC establishment in 1934 and last December 31, officials estimated yesterday, foreclosures were authorized on 67,735 homes. This did not indicate, they added hastily, that the foreclosures were carried out.

"As a matter of fact," an official said, "the corporation acquired only 21,201 pieces of property up to December 31."

Railroader Invents 'Bathtub Shock' Cure

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 11 (AP).—A railroad conductor who mixed inventing and ticket-punching claimed today to have a cure for "bathtub shock"—that shiver that comes from climbing over cold bathtub rims.

Joseph F. Sahloff, said he had applied the principle of the motor car water-heater to the bathroom in the invention of a preheated bathtub. The tub not only protects the bather against shock, he said, but warms the bathroom as well.

According to police who investigated the accident, Mrs. Myers walked into the street from between parked cars into the path of Clarke's machine. She suffered internal injuries and shock.

Nevada Senate Passes Bill for Legal Lotteries

Carson City, Nev., Feb. 11 (AP).—The Nevada Senate today approved, 13 to 4, a resolution to legalize lotteries in this State.

Senator W. A. Marsh, said the purpose was to make lotteries a State monopoly so taxes might be reduced and "a real old age pension plan be put through instead of this pauper's relief program we have before us."

"We already have gambling," he continued, "and it's no more immoral for the State to collect from a lottery than from other gambling devices."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Stock-taking

The executive council, American Federation of Government Employes—18 men and 3 women in all—are here today for stock-taking of a very large stock. They want to learn how their own legislative program—otherwise, their own objectives—are grooving in with the President's reorganization plan and how the A. F. G. E. lodge members, country-wide, are viewing the whole thing.

Col. Charles I. Stengel, A. F. G. E. president, says that one thing, certainly, will come from the two-day sessions: he will known definitely what the members, country-wide, are thinking. This is certain because the executive council members will bring word from such widely apart places as Boston and San Francisco, Philadelphia and Detroit, St. Paul and Atlanta.

And in advance of the sessions, he would like the council members to do some thinking on the troublesome question of WPA project lodges. The problem: WPA project lodges have been started by persons engaged on temporary projects. When the project ends, the workers know—Col. Stengle certainly knows—that the Federal connection for the workers terminates. Question: What should become of the worker and the lodge, so far as the A. F. G. E. is concerned? The executive council may have an answer. At least they may admit a problem.

Undoubtedly, the five ousted lodges of the A. F. G. E. will endeavor, through representatives, to find out just where they stand, and Col. Stengle, stout, bespectacled, will ask the 13 vice presidents of the council what they and their constituents think of the legislative program, and what they would wish to do about such points as conflict with the President's reorganization plan.

Some of the A. F. G. E.'s objectives: A minimum wage of $1,500 per annum for all full-time employes with statutory automatic increases in salary; a 5-day week of 35 hours with no decrease of pay to be applied throughout the Government service; extension of the merit system to include all branches of the civil government; the extension of the classification act to the field service; repeal of section 213, regarded as a discriminatory measure; 30-year optional retirement, with the additional provisions that employes retired on account of disability who recover be given the same status as an employe not voluntarily separated after 15 years of service and having reached the age of 55 years, until such time as his re-employment can be effected.

The council this morning will attend hearings on Representative Ramspeck's bill to extend the merit system to all branches of Government service. Some of the members will want to be heard. Tomorrow morning the council will go to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as guests of J. Edgar Hoover. From there they will return to executive sessions. The press will be treated with after the meetings.

Facts: Those expected to attend are William Green, A. F. of L.; civil service commissioners; Senator Bulow, of the Civil Service Committee; Representatives Ramspeck, McCormack, Griswold and Jenckes.

Profile or Full-Face

Want to get your picture, profile or full face, in the slick-paper magazine published by the National Federation of Federal Employes? You can, providing you're an "old timer," that is, if you've been a member of good standing for 20 years and perhaps were at the organization meeting in Washington in 1917. Charter members' pictures are especially wanted.

Another Directory

The Little Congress—congressmen's secretaries in playful or serious mood—has reconsidered the plan of Maximiano Marmito Villareal, of the Philippine Islands. The plan is for publication of a directory of the members of the Little Congress. Progress, to date: The appointment of a publication committee by Bill Ashworth, of Oregon, Little Congress speaker. The committee: Maximiano Marmito Villareal, Robert E. Lambert, Missouri, and Lillian Gillilan, Minnesota.

Why Restrict It?

Research engineers of the Agriculture Department have been ferreted out at work on a plan for making farmhouses comfortable with warmth in winter and coolness in summer. Which would certainly be a boon to the farmer and the farmer's daughter, the farmer's wife and all concerned. But don't restrict it to farmhouses, Mr. Research Engineer. Houses in Washington become cold in winter and hot in summer.

Death-Watch

Miss Diana Rogovin is sitting out the death-watch, performing the last service for the once-vast NRA . . . She is working on the final report and when that's finished her job is dead as the Blue Eagle . . . Which doesn't disturb Miss Rogovin, whose face smiles easily and whose mood is simply this: To do one job at a time; when that's finished, well, look for another . . . We wonder how she feels, watching a vast experiment die in a city where all other experiments are expanding?

Everything's Just Fine

The reports from the last meeting of Local Union, No. 105, Women's Union, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, were so genuinely optimistic and hopeful that the world, which some think is just a delusion and a snare, should know about it. To begin with, Fannie Harper, chairman, credit union committees, reported the credit union "pregressing splendidly," that the union had "a most successful year." Mae Bergevia, secretary-treasurer of the local, reported on a largely increased membership. Matilda Lindsay reported the chartering of eight locals by the N. F. F. E. in the past week and said membership is increasing in the District and the field. Then the entertainment committe reported plans for several interesting events for the near future. Following this, Belle A. Trouland was nominated president for her fourteenth consecutive term. Mignon Miller and Gertrude M. McNally were nomiated for vice president and corresponding secretary, respetcively, and all told, the report of the meeting held more optimism than anything we've heard of in a long time.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

I suppose men will always have their ideals of women, but it seems to me like they was easier to find in the old days. It's kinda confusin' now when you meet them in barber shops and lined up along the bars in cocktail rooms. And just the other day, I read an article that some woman wrote on pipe smokin'.

I know a fella in New York who ran with a purty fast set and he said he liked all the girls in the crowd he ran with, but when he get married, he was gonna get a girl who could blush. One Summer, he came down home to see me and he met one of the girls there and he took her out to dinner. Without thinkin,' he happened to tell one of the stories that he used to tell up in New York and when he finished, he looked up at the girl and her face was "as red as a beet." Well sir, he apologized to her and wound up by proposin' to her. After they'd been married four years, finally one day, he told her that the reason he married her was because she blushed when he told that story—she never did tell him that the reason her face was so red was because she started to laugh at his joke and choked on a fish bone.

Tears for Sissies—Not for Ruth!

Plucky 3-year-old Ruth Oden, of 515 Florida avenue northeast, choked back tears when her hand was caught in a door at her home yesterday. Unable to free herself, she kept a brave face while her mother and her 4-year-old brother, Beverly, stood helplessly by until the Rescue Squad came to their aid. The door was pried loose and Ruth was taken to the hospital, where physicians said her fingers were badly bruised. Comforting his sister is Beverly, left.

Tsk! Cradle Marriages Here? It Could Happen, Laws Reveal

D. C. Rules Show Girl of 14 and Boy of 16 May Wed if Parents Approve; Tightening of Statutes Urged by Attorney.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"It couldn't happen here!"

That's what many Washingtonians smugly thought, and said, when they read accounts of the recent "cradle-marriage" in Tennessee. On second thought, they might have examined the District law to see exactly what could happen here.

If they had, they learned that girls of 14 could marry boys of 16 with the consent of their parents or guardians; and that a young woman must be at least 18 and a young man must be 21 before they can marry without the consent of parents or guardians. All of which, it would seem, makes it fairly certain that no 22-year-old man in the District could wed a 9-year-old child.

"But that doesn't mean our marriage law is a good one," said Jean M. Boardman, local attorney, who made an extensive study of this subject long before the cradle-marriage case threw the spotlight on the laxity of marriage laws in many localities. "What happened in Tennessee isn't likely to happen here—but it might. Furthermore, the current marriage law and the common law, also decreed valid here, permit plenty of practices that are just as questionable."

Suggestions Offered.

Discussing ways and means of tightening laws here so that perjury as to age of applicants would be far more difficult and boys and girls could be protected against rushing into marriage without due consideration, Boardman offered these suggestions:

1. Common-law marriage should be abolished. "The D. C. Court of Appeals has decreed that such marriage is valid," he said. "But in view of the fact that weddings of this type generally complicate legal affairs of the persons concerned and tend to undermine the strength of other laws regulating wedlock, it seems the only way to tighten our legal power in regard to marriage is to abolish the common-law. It seems unbelievable that a 14-year-old girl and a 16-year-old boy in the District could agree to become husband and wife and thereby contract a valid common-law marriage beyond the power of any court to annul; but that is exactly what could happen here now."

2. Unless parents give their consent—in person or by a statement sworn to before a notary—the marriage of a girl under 18 and a boy under 21 should be voidable. "Both the young man and the young woman should be required to appear in person to make application, and parents should also be present if applicants are under age," he said. "Under the present law, neither the young man nor the young woman has to be present. A man can have a friend obtain the license, state the ages of the applicants, and sign a fictitious name! This has been done in the District. A safeguard against such a questionable practice could be established if the law required both applicants to present themselves at the bureau with proof-of-age certificates, and with parents accompanying them in case they are under age."

3. At least three days should transpire between the time application is made and the license granted. "At present a couple can obtain a license and be married within half an hour," he explained. "If the three-day arrangement came into effect, the application could be published, ages could be checked, and parents in every case could know about the proposed marriage in time to intervene, if necessary.

Marriages Elsewhere Seen.

"This would eliminate the danger of our ever having a Eunice Winstead-Charlie Johns case in the District. The three-day provision, of course, would send a large number couples to the Gretna Greens of Maryland and Virginia."

4. A complete health examination should be required of every marriage-license applicant. "As the law is now, a man and a woman either or both of whom are afflicted with leprosy, syphilis or tuberculosis are allowed to marry. A person can also deliberately marry a lunatic—even though if he does he can never obtain, under any condition, an annulment or a divorce. A health certificate presented at the time of application for a marriage license would take care of all such cases."

Papal Service Set for Today At Catholic U.

Anniversary of Pontiff's Coronation to Be Celebrated.

With foreign diplomats, American Government officials and high-ranking dignitaries of the church in attendance, the fifteenth anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius XI will be observed this morning at 10:30 o'clock at a solemn high mass in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, will deliver the sermon commemorating the ascension of Pius XI to the papal throne. The mass will be celebrated by Mgr. Egidio Vagnozzi, D. D., J. C. D., auditor of the Apostolic Delegation. The Rev. Edward Reilly will be deacon and the Rev. John Kilgariff subdeacon.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, seated on a throne, will have as his assistants the Rev. Donald McLean, the Rev. Francis Mullen and the Rev. Martin Higgins.

Official Celebration.

Washington will be the scene of the only official celebration of Pope Pius' coronation anniversary in the United States, and members of the Diplomatic Corps will be witnessing a ceremony similar to ceremonies taking place in their own capitals throughout the world.

Pope Pius XI, the 260th successor of St. Peter, was born at Desio, Italy, May 31, 1857, and was ordained a priest December 20, 1879. He was appointed Apostolic Visitor to Poland in 1918, raised to the rank of Nuncio in 1919 and made Bishop in the same year. On June 16, 1921, he was made Cardinal Archbishop of Milan, and on February 6, following, he was elected Pope. His coronation took place six days later.

Vatican City Recognition.

Though Popes always have claimed temporal sovereignty, Pius XI is the first Pontiff since 1870 to obtain recognition from Italy of his independent authority in the Vatican City dominions. By virtue of the concordat signed by the late Cardinal Gasparri for Pope Pius and by Premier Mussolini for the King of Italy, on February 11, 1929, the Holy Father's complete authority to rule in his own possession was recognized.

Pope Pius, always intensely interested in scientific progress, inaugurated the custom of a world-wide radio broadcast from Vatican City in 1931 on the occasion of the ninth anniversary of his coronation.

Bills to Aid Boy Scouts Introduced in Congress

Companion bills authorizing the granting of special favors to the Boy Scouts of America for the Washington jamboree and the one in Holland were introduced in the Senate and House yesterday by Senator Copeland, of New York, and Representative Hill, of Alabama.

One of the measures directs the War Department to turn over obsolete equipment to the National Boy Scout Council, while the other authorizes the Internal Revue Bureau to waive taxes on steamship tickets and the State Department to issue free passports to Scouts to attend the Holland meeting.

Teacher Foes Of Red Rider Are Assailed

Rep. Jenckes Attacks D. C. School Board on 'Insult' Remark.

Senate Cicularized With Advice to Approve Amendment.

By James D. Secrest.

The Board of Education and Washington public school teachers were peppered by two strong defenders of Red Rider yesterday in the House and in the Senate.

Representative Virgina E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, let loose a vitriolic attack on the school board in the House and warned the members not to be "deceived by the statements of the Board of Education that the McCormack amendment is an insult to the rank and file teachers."

George E. Sullivan, self-styled chairman of "The Special Committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations on Elimination of Communistic Propaganda from D. C. Public Schools" at the same time was circularizing the Senate with advice on how to handle the McCormack amendment when it is called up.

Satisfaction Predicted.

Sullivan confidently predicted that the "pink rider" as passed by the House should satisfy everyone save the Communists.

"While the rank and file of teachers are, obviously, not free, with their positions in constant jeopardy, to express publicly their real attitude," Sullivan said in a circular letter to all Senators, "they necessarily understand that such a protective law is in no sense an insult to them, but directed merely against possible violators, for the benefit and protection of the teaching profession, as well as of the pupils."

Cried Mrs. Jenckes from the House floor:

"Washington is the hotbed of international propagandists. Foreign propaganda and influence of a communistic character have already removed the flag poles and the American flags from the tops of our Federal buildings along Pennsylvania avenue in our Nation's Capital.

Quick Spread Seen.

"If Congress permits the Board of Education of the District of Columbia to legalize the advocacy of communism in public schools in the Nation's Capital, then communistic propaganda will quickly be in every public school in America, and it won't be long before this same communistic influence will remove the crosses from the steeples of our churches in every city in America.

"I appeal to Congress to prevent this attempt on the part of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia to legalize the advocacy of communism in the public schools of Washington."

Mrs. Jenckes reiterated the charges which she made against the Board of Education before the Kennedy sub-committee last year.

Sullivan Explains.

Sullivan, in a letter to The Post, stated that the "informative communication" to the Senators was drafted at a meeting of the committee, of which he is chairman. The other members are Harry N. Stull and Mrs. Horace J. Phelps.

He stated that the Federation of Citizens Associations "has at no time taken the position that factual and truthful data about communism (controdictinguished from falsehood and deceptive propaganda in its favor), should be in any wise banned" from the public schools.

In his letter to the Senators he said that "an extensive investigation conducted by this organization disclosed much communistic propaganda (distinguished from factual and truthful data about communism)."

Points With Alarm.

Among the "alarming facts" disclosed to the Senators by Sullivan was that "about 15 per cent of the teaching corps here (officials and teachers) are graduates of Teachers College, Columbia University, which has been prominent for many years as carrying on its staff professors with a distinct Red or Marxian inclination.

"A large number of our public school teachers," he continued, "are also members of a general organization which voted at its convention in August, 1936, to appropriate $5,000 immediately for the Spanish Reds (misnamed Spanish Loyalists), and which general organization of public school teachers has received aid from the Communist-giving Garland Fund."

House District Groups Will Decide Programs

A joint executive meeting of the two sub-committees of the House District Committee charged with studying the legislative recommendations of the Jacobs committee on fiscal relations will meet Tuesday, it was decided yesterday.

The purpose of the meeting, it was said, is to draft a general program of procedure for the two groups so that the inquiries will not overlap.

The sub-committee, headed by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, will handle the tax and fiscal relations proposals, while the group headed by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, will investigate the recommendatoins relative to altering the District administrative set-up and local suffrage.

The bazookas are coming.

The picture above is only the beginning, boys and girls, only the beginning. Shirley Povich, Post sports editor, may be the town's envy today with that bazooka in his possession, but in a few days the whole boy-and-girl population of Washington will be talking about The Post-Bob Burns bazooka contest.

The four envious gentlemen for whom Povich is performing are members of The Post's sports staff—Bill McCormick, extreme Post carefully for further details left; Lewis Atchison, seated, and Loren Pope and Walter Haight, left to right standing. Pope seems to be genuinely amused; Atchison a little surprised at the versatility with the bazooka, as displayed by Povich, and Haight and McCormick are smugly waiting until their turns to show their own prowess.

That's about all the story for the moment. The bazookas are coming to town and every boy and girl will want to watch The of a whale of a big prize contest for bazooka players.

Bob Burns, out in Hollywood, is watching the Washington bazooka playing situation very carefully and will have a hand, one way or another, in congratulating the winners.

This much can be told right now: the big bazooka contest will be staged at a local theater and is open to every boy and girl in Washington and neighborhood. Full details will be found in The Post in another day or two.

Jeffersonian Memorial Hall Is Disapproved

Commission of 12 Opposes D. C. Auditorium as Tribute.

Still involved with one another, though they are being pursued separately, plans for a new public building program, an auditorium and a Thomas Jefferson memorial were furthered yesterday at conferences at the White House and the Interior Department.

Following a meeting with the President, Chairman John J. Boylan of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission said his 12-man group was definitely opposed to the suggestion the memorial take the form of an auditorium.

Meanwhile, holding its first meeting in the Interior Building, the committee selected this week by President Roosevelt to study the Federal housing shortage in the Capital and make appropriate recommendations outlined its program. Secretary Ickes, chairman, said one of the things with which the group will concern itself is the location of the proposed memorial.

Non-Utilitarian.

Leaving the White House, Representative Boylan said the President approved, in general, the policy of the memorial commission and emphasized its desire to build a non-commercial, non-utilitarian monument which will symbolize the character of Jefferson.

Although a wave of opposition, in and out of Congress, greeted the New York Representative's announcement last December that the majority of his commission favored locating the marble memorial south of the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park, he said yesterday that the group still favors that site.

Boylan said if Washington needs an auditorium, he will do all he can to help obtain one, but "I will not agree to its serving as a national memorial to Jefferson."

A bill creating a commission which will study and make recommendations on all phases of the auditorium question—feasibility, cost, location, operation, etc.—is now awaiting President Roosevelt's signature.

Architect Is Present.

Accompanying Chairman Boylan to the White House were Stuart G. Gibboney, head of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, and Dr. Fiske Kimball, curator of the Pennsylvania Museum of Art, both members of the commission. Also there was the New York architct, John Russell Pope, who has submitted a number of designs for the monument.

Boylan said he has called a meeting of the full group for next Thursday in his office, when final decisions as to the design and location are expected to be made public.

At the building committee meeting presided over by Chairman Ickes, it was decided to form a subcommittee which will gather statistical data and otherwise assist in the survey. It will be comprised of representatives of the National Park Service, Procurement Division of the Treasury and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Questionnaires will be sent to all Government departments and independent agencies, said Ickes, to learn what are their present space needs and whether their future requirements will be greater, smaller or the same.

Suspect Arrested On FugitiveCharge

James Little Skinner, 44, of Logan Circle, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday on a fugitive warrant charging him with the embezzlement of $1,100.

Arrested Wednesday night by Detective Sergts. Guy Rone and Richard Cox, Skinner pleaded not guilty and demanded 30 days in which to fight extradition. He waived preliminary hearings and the case was set for next month.

According to information received here from Gettysburg, Pa., Skinner is alleged to have sold 50 shares of bogus oil stock to Carrie E. Tawney, of Gettysburg. The warrant was forwarded here by the chief of police of Gettysburg.

N. Y. Architect Assails Capitol Front Change

The last words, pro and con, on the proposed extension of the east front of the Capitol were heard yesterday by the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds as it concluded public hearings on the bill, sponsored by Chairman Tom Connally.

After the last witness had testified, the committee inspected the 33-year-old plaster cast of the Capitol which demonstrates what the building would look like if scheme "B," one of the alternative plans authorized by the bill, were carried into effect. It projects the east facade an additional 32 feet.

Senator Connally probably will call his committee together next week to decide whether or not the measure shall be favorably reported to the Senate. In 1935 the upper house passed an almost identical bill, also introduced by the Texan, but it died on the House side.

Assailing the proposal from every angle, Lorimer Rich, New York architect, recommended the construction of additions to the House and Senate wings if more office space is imperative. David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, previously had pointed out that enactment of the measure would provide needed additional space, besides correcting the "overhang" of the dome and replacing the sandstone of the original and central portion of the Capitol with marble.

"These added wings," said Rich, who designed the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, "if kept to a reasonable projection would in no manner interfere with the present composition of the building."

He charged that defenders of the alteration scheme cannot make up their minds just how much the central portion should be pushed forward, said that the dome overhang was "a most happy accident" and warned that the remodeling in question would destroy the three-part composition which now distinguishes the east elevation of the Capitol.

"It has stood for over 100 years as a valuable example of our early architecture," Rich pleaded. "These changes would remove the last vestiges of the impressive and historic design of the Capitol bequeathed to the Nation by its founders. It should be cherished and allowed to remain undisturbed."

Answering Rich's argument that projection of the east facade would diminish the prominence of the dome, Maj. George Oakley Totteh, jr., said this would be a good thing.

Charwoman Accused In $70 Safe Robbery

A 32-year-old charwoman was being held last night in connection with the theft January 12 of $70 from a safe in the office of Representative Mathew J. Merritt.

The woman, arrested by Detective Sergt. Watson Salkeld, gave her name as Maud Elizabeth Shepherd, of the 100 block D street southeast. Salkeld quoted the woman as saying she opened the safe after she had found the combination on the desk of the Representative.

District Control Board Asks Abolition of Transfers.

Reputed "racketeering" and "chiseling" practices of certain local liquor and beer dealers were scored by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday in a request to the Commissioners for abolition of license transfers and a limitation on by-the-drink liquor, beer and wine permits.

The board proposed amendments to the liquor act limiting the number of C licenses—liquor by the drink—to 300 and the number of D licenses—beer and wine by the drink—to 400.

In seeking an end to liquor license transfers, the board suggested another amendment to the act, explaining:

"This is ver ynecessary, as it would do away with the racket which has developed in sale of licenses for exorbitant prices."

The transfer amendment, as proposed, would forbid transfer or assignment of permits to other persons when local dealers sold their business. It would require the new owners to secure new licenses.

In requesting a limitation on the number of class C and D permits, the board held that the suggested figures were "sufficient to supply needs of the public." When licenses were renewed February 1, there were 338 by-the-drink liquor permits and 448 retail beer licenses on record, the board reported.

Major difficulties in enforcement, it was pointed out, came from these two types of licenses. Competition was blamed for repeated law infractions by "on sale" dealers.

Of the 1,918 licenses of all types recorded last year, 41 per cent were C and D permits, the board said, and 70 per cent of the total infraction convictions were of by-the-drink liquor and beer dealers.

"It would appear from this percentage," the board reported, "that violation of the law by retailers holding class C and D licenses is much higher than the other classes of permits and the board believes that due to the economic stress of too much competition, the licensees are encouraged to chisel."

In the last two years, there has been a limit of 400 on class B licenses—for the sale of bottled liquor. When the Commissioners recently ordered renewal of this limit, they suggested the number be cut to 300 as soon as possible.

5 REVOLTING YANKS MUST SIGN 'OR ELSE'—RUPPERT

SPORTS The Washington Post SPORTS

18 X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1937 ★★★★

Gehrig Demands $50,000; Powell Seeking $14,000

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 11.—Col. Jacob Ruppert today flatly refused to meet the salary demands of five revolting New York Yankee players, and advised them to sign at a reasonable figure or suffer the consequences.

"I'll put a ball club on the field this spring no matter what happens," the Colonel fumed. "I've taken a definite stand on this and I'll see it through."

Ruppert revealed that first baseman Lou Gehrig had been offered $31,000 and was asking $50,000; Pitcher Red Ruffing had been offered $15,000 (a $3,000 raise) and wants $30,000; outfielder Jake Powell, $7,500, and demanded $14,000, and Pitcher Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, $7,500 (a $12,500 cut). Gomez sent his contract back without comment.

"I can understand how a man and his employer can be a few thousand dollars apart on a single year's salary," said Ruppert of his world champion holdouts. "But when a man asks $19,000 a year more, that's another thing."

Gehrig Explains.

When Ruppert revealed the extent of Gehrig's demands, Lou pointed out in a formal statement that the Yankees haven't needed a reserve first baseman for 12 years, and because of this they were in a position last year to sell three first basemen for a reported price of $105,000.

Furthermore, Gehrig added, "I yielded to the colonel's wishes during the depression years, and now that recovery is well on its way, as the past season's near-record attendance indicates, I feel I am only asking what I believe to be my value to the club."

Coming out of a brewers' meeting late in the day, the genial Ruppert shot verbal holes in Gehrig's statement.

"In the first place, it's none of Gehrig's business what I do with my ball players," he insisted. "I've spent a fortune to develop the system which develops these players. And as far as Lou's salary is concerned, I gave him what he wanted two years ago.

"When I sent him his contract at that time, it was for $30,000. He asked for $31,000 and got it."

Ruppert pointed out that Jimmy Foxx was said to be getting only $18,000 from the Boston Red Sox, but quickly added:

"Of course, I don't think Jimmy's as good as Gehrig. But he's good, just the same."

He also said that when Gehrig conferred with him about salary originally, he (Ruppert) reminded Lou that Mickey Cochrane was only getting around $28,000 for catching and managing the Detroit Tigers.

"I'm not trying to beat these players down," he added. "I think anybody in baseball will tell you I've never been measly. But there has to be a limit somewhere."

Ruppert pointed out that Jake Powell had been given a $1,000 raise when he came from Washington to the Yanks last year at a $5,000 salary.

Took Series Money.

"In addition to this, he got into the World Series and got a cut of the series money," Ruppert went on. "And now he asks me for $14,000, exactly $8,000 more than his 1936 salary."

The Yankee owner conceded DiMaggio "was probably ill-advised," but said he could not understand Ruffing's request for $30,000.

"He was a holdout last year, and he had a good year," Ruppert said, "but he wrote a letter saying he was dissatisfied and mentioned $30,000 as an equitable figure."

Ruppert described such demands as "ridiculous," and didn't quibble over what will happen if the players insist in their demands.

"They'll make those demands reasonable, sign and convince me they're satisfied—or else," he stormed. "And they'll play their best ball, too. I'm not going to start the season with any dissatisfied ball players on my team, even if I have to bring a lot of youngsters in from other clubs. There isn't a man on the team who can't be replaced."

Returning to Gehrig's $50,000 demand, Ruppert explained that Lou had asked for a $40,000 contract with the stipulation that he receive another $10,000 if he plays 100 games this coming season.

"Recently Gehrig outlined his plans for playing 2,500 consecutive games (he has played 1,808 now), and the way it looks I'm being asked to pay $10,000 a year extra to see him do this," the colonel commented.

"I think his record is admirable, but personally I think when I pay him $31,000 a year I have a right to expect him to play as many games as he can without paying him extra for it."

Angry as he was, however, Ruppert didn't neglect to pay his respects to Gehrig. "He's a fine player, and a splendid young man," the colonel conceded, "but I don't think he realizes there were many years when my business didn't even make $31,000.

Of the five holdouts Ruppert mentioned, only Gomez was conceded any sort of argument. The colonel described his $7,500 offer as "just a starter." Ruppert said he knew nothing about Pitcher Monte Pearson, but admitted that in the confusion "I may have missed him."

Shore Breaks Leg In Game at Yale; Lost to G. U. Five

A broken leg suffered by Carroll Shore early in the game with Yale last night, will cost Georgetown's basketball team the loss of its brilliant guard for the remainder of the season, the university was informed last night.

SHORE.

Father Kehoe, faculty athletic adviser, was notified of the accident by a telegram from Coach Freddie Mesmer in New Haven, Conn. The message revealed that Shore, considered by many "the finest basketball player in the District," had broken the tibia bone near the ankle. Yale had a 12-11 lead about the time the accident happened and won the game, 48 to 26.

Shore was removed to a New Haven hospital. He was to leave for Washington either by a midnight train or by a train early this morning. The other members of the squad left last night for Syracuse, where they will play Syracuse University tonight.

Yale Trounces Hoya Cagers By 48 to 26

Efforts of Bassin, Murphy Unavailing as Elis Pull Ahead With Ease.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 11.—Yale overwhelmed Georgetown, 48 to 26, tonight in a surprise basketball victory. The Elis, surging into an early lead, ended the first half with a 24-13 advantage and steadily drew away from the invaders.

Georgetown's best showing included cutting down Yale's first five-minute onrush and pulling alongside to within a single point, with Yale merely leading, 12-11, midway in the opening half.

John Norton, installed for a tryout at center, was individual high scorer with 12 points, Capt. Buddy Miles and Carroll Frantz closely pressed him with 11. Bob Beck with registered 10.

Harry Bassin and Joe Murphy, who alternated in the right forward position, led the Georgetown scoring with 8 apiece.

Both coaches, Fred Mesmer and Ken Loeffler, played a short-basket tossing game and spectacular scoring shots were infrequent.

The Georgetown playing combination was constantly shifted. The four first half changes were more than duplicated late in the second when Messmer's final effort to check the Yale onrush sent a complete new five upon the floor. Although the Yale tallying ceased, the Georgetown attack failed to produce scores in a final five-minute exhibition of perfect blocking.

Episcopal Quintet Stopped by Swelled Cheeks, Not Heads

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 11.—Although few teams have been able to halt Episcopal High's powerful basketball team this season, a few cases of the mumps stopped the basket-tossers cold here today.

Scheduled to play Staunton Military Academy in one of the major games of the Virginia prep school season, Episcopal was forced to postpone the game because of five cases of mumps among the students.

School officials said the athletic program is held up indefinitely because of the epidemic. Five students have the diseases, none of whom are athletes. Episcopal is one of the chief contenders for the Virginia prep school basketball championship.

Colonials Drub Davis-Elkins Five, 50-26

Kiesel Leads Rout With 15 Points; Goldfaden and O'Brien Get 8 Each.

Exhibiting a flashy passing attack that wormed its way through a none-too-clever zone defense, the George Washington basketers ran rough-shod over Davis and Elkins, 50-26, at the G street gym last night to keep their record on local courts unspotted.

This victory was the twenty-third straight for the Colonials.

After a slow first half in which the two teams played along even-stephen, George Washington began an assault upon the basket that never ceased until the final whistle. With O'Brien, Kiesel and Goldfaden hitting the cords with dead-eye-dick precision, the half ended with Davis and Elkins on the short end of a 23-16 decision.

Starting the second period with all the seriousness of a lad trying to make good before the home folks, the Colonials ran up 14 consecutive points before their foes could find the basket. This outburst of point-tallying was too much for the visitors, and they seemed to wilt under the strain. There was no stopping the local team after that, even when the reserves were sent in.

Foe of Torrance Walked Out Rather Than Take 'Dive'

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 11 (AP).—Brother Peter, deputy State boxing commissioner, said tonight, investigation showed Jack Willis, who he said was really Arthur Huttuck, New York heavyweight, walked out on a scheduled boxing match with Jack Torrance because he did not want to "take a dive."

Herb Brodie, Torrance's manager, termed the statement by Brother Peter, faculty member of Catholic High School of Baton Rouge "preposterous."

Brother Peter definitely exonerated Torrance, world champion shot-putter, who recently embarked on a fistic career, from "knowledge of anything crooked in the affair."

Torrance's opponent disappeared from a dressing room last night when the time came for him to fight Torrance.

4 Cities Seek Pro Football Franchise

Chicago, Feb. 11 (AP).—National professional football league magnates will take a tenth member into the fold tomorrow after listening to oratory by bidders from Cleveland, Boston, Buffalo and Los Angeles.

The addition of a tenth team in football-for-profit's major league will be the main item of business at the annual meeting. The remainder of the two-day session will be devoted to schedule building, election of officers, any player transactions the club owners may be able to stir up, and formally voting the champion Green Bay Packers the Ed Thorp Memorial Trophy.

Cleveland's Location Liked.

Backers of the Cleveland Rams, who operated in the shanky American pro league last year, appear to have the edge in the scramble for the coveted tenth franchise. Its location would make it a logical member of the league's Western division, which has gone along with four teams, to five in the Eastern section, for the last three years.

Boston, which lost its membership last December when George Marshall transferred his Redskins to Washington, is expected to make a brisk bid for another chance. Its chances were considered slim, however, because of Marshall's reason for moving out—lack of support at the gate.

Buffalo, a prospective member of the Western division, will have a huge new stadium as its chief talking point. The Los Angeles plea, George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, said, probably will be tabled because of transportation problems.

Western Juniors Beat Central, 27-21

Dusek Tosses Katan in Mat 'Overtime'

Grapplers Work 1 Minute Over the Hour; Kennedy, McLeod Triumph.

By Bill McCormick.

Ernie Dusek and John Katan went on a 61-minute sit-down strike at Turner's Arena last night before The Dusek finally flopped Jawn before a crowd of 1,900.

The presence of the overflow crowd prevented the boys from indulging in their usual pastime of heaving each other out of the ring, but while sitting down the grapplers did their best to keep matters interesting for even the most bloodthirsty.

Not content with violating all rules and regulations by waiting one minute more than an hour before finally subduing Katan, Ernie further rebelled by surviving every "killing" hold and tactic known to the mat business before squashing his antagonist.

A description of the finishing few moments of the contest will serve to give an idea of about what happened during the hour preceding. Dusek landed a flying tackle, which sent Katan flat on his back.

Not According to Hoyle.

As Ernie rushed in for the kill, Katan kicked him resoundingly on the chin—and Dusek fell flat on his back. This ordinarily would be the cue for Katan to climb on Ernie's recumbent form while the referee counted the necessary 1-2-3, but such was not the case last night as Dusek jumped to his feet.

Katan punched Ernie around the ring with his elbows and Ernie wavered—then fell. Once again it looked as though Dusek had been scheduled to lose, but instead he kicked Katan and, as John fell, picked him up by the heels and spun him around like an overgrown slingshot.

After whirling Katan around many times, Ernie finally let him fly and John came to rest just inside the ropes. Ernie then dove for his form, and was himself kicked in the face. Once again it seemed routined that Katan should win, as Katan picked him up, bounced him once in a body slam and then took him for an airplane spin. Surely, this infallible hold, which never had failed Jim Londos would not fail Katan. But it did.

As Katan wound up the spin by making a three-point landing with the Dusek carcass on the mat, the propeller got clogged, the motor

Cards Score 3 Knockouts In Victory

Turner, Rogers Beaten in 165, Heavy Classes; by W. Md. Boxers.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Little "Tex" Guinan, Catholic University's featherweight who has been victimized so consistently this season by the local boxing commission's judges, finally succeeded in winning a decision last night as the Cardinals blasted Western Maryland for a 5-to-3 victory.

"Tex" knocked out his man, Paul Brangle, with two solid rights to the jaw in the second round, laying him flatter than a worn carpet and placing the decision far beyond reach of the judges.

But not to be outdone the judges, Dr. O. U. Singer and Dr. Bob Eller, atoned for the mishap by awarding Joe O'Leair the decision over Fred Rogers in the heavyweight class to the undisguised amazement of the 2,500 fans in attendance.

There was another off-chord note about the proceedings. Referee "Muggsy" Morris actually voted for the winner. But "Muggsy" is only human and mistakes will happen.

Both teams used two freshmen, Catholic U. sticking in its rookies because the Terrors consider boxing a minor sport and do not abide by a one-year residence rule, and honors were evenly divided. Fred Stant, a Norfolk boy, knocked out lanky Steve Andrews in the senior welterweight division for Catholic's victory; but Jay Turner, a reformed local amteaur, dropped the decision to Clint Walker.

Mix Stages Best Fight.

Fred Mix, Catholic's 145-pounder, gave the prettiest boxing exhibition of the evening in outpointing Bill Bender. The latter tried vainly to land a knockout punch, but the clever Mix kept him off balance and at a safe distance with a snaky left.

Another popular victory was scored for the eventual winners in the lightweight class when Southpaw Nester Martinez won a technical knockout from Hyde Dooley, a rugged rookie. Martinez, although no veteran himself, had a little too much experience for his rival and far too much steam behind his punches. The bout, consequently was stopped in the second round.

Dave Bernstien ushered in the evening auspiciously for the host team, banging out an easy victory over Odell Osteen. The fast and clever little Jewish lad could have put Osteen among the moth balls at any time, but chose to box with him over the three rounds.

Guinan Fights Well.

Guinan fought a perfect fight in stopping Brengle. He started cautiously, ducking under Brengle's earlier punches and countering with a left to the head. Brengle caught on to the style quickly, however, and bringing his punches up, gave "Tex" several belts in the brisket that did him no good.

Guinan took the punishment gamely, patiently waiting for the Westminster walloper to make an opening for his right, and sure enough Brengel did. "Tex" rammed a hard right to the chin and the Terror feathers knees buckled. Guinan socked him once again with that right, bringing it from way in section A.A., and Brengle toppled stiffly on his head. A count was unnecessary.

115 pounds—Bernstein (C. U.) defeated Osteen.
125 pounds—Guinan (C. U.) knocked out Brengle, 1:05 of first.
135 pounds—Martinez (C. U.) defeated Dooly, technical knockout, 0:55 of second.
145 pounds—Mix (C. U.) defeated Bendeer.
165 pounds—Walker (Western Maryland) defeated Turner.
175 pounds—C. U. forfeited.
Heavyweight—O'Leair (Western Maryland) defeated Rogers.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

When club owners revolt against wage demands, then it is that the reading public is admitted to the salary secrets of big league baseball. Zealously do the magnates guard their pay-roll figures, always fearful as they are of professional jealousy among their athletes.

Until Col. Jake Ruppert, his patience exhausted at the tactics of the Yankee holdout brigade, worked up a nice case of fury yesterday and spluttered salary figures all over the premises, fans could only guess which players were being paid how much or how little. Only in such cases as Babe Ruth's $80,000 salary, in which Ruppert for some reason took personal pride, were official figures actually known. And in the Babe's case, the publicity anent his prodigious salary repaid Ruppert manifold for his expenditure.

But now we learn from the infuriated colonel that Lou Gehrig was offered $30,000 last season, held out for $31,000 and received it. And that Gehrig this season is seeking another $19,000 increase; and that Jake Powell, who came to the Yankees as a $5,000-a-year outfielder and was immediately given a $1,000 raise, now values his services at $14,000. And that Pitcher Charley Ruffing wants $30,000 for 1937, and that Lefty Gomez is protesting a $12,500 cut in his $20,000 wage of last season.

Those are, indeed, toothsome morsels for curious fans long in ignorance of the actual salary figures in their favorites' contracts. And they provide, too, a striking commentary on the shocking inequalities and vagaries of baseball salaries.

F'r instance: Here is Ruffing, quite unblushingly asking $30,000 for his 1937 services at a time when Carl Hubbell, of the Giants, has already signed for $25,000. Yet no student of pitching or the lay fan would make so bold as to mention Ruffing in the same breath with the great Hubbell. Ruffing, of course, will not receive the $30,000 he demands, but it's a tip off on his self-esteem, and he probably reckoned there was no harm in asking.

Ruppert's revelation that Powell was a $5,000-ball player with Washington last summer before he was traded to the Yankees for Ben Chapman is added evidence that ball players are not paid for their actual worth to the team, but are signed at figures which represent the best bargain which club owners are able to drive.

Powell was Washington's regular centerfielder, even as Chapman was the Yankee's regular centerfielder. And both apparently were rated on a par inasmuch as it was an even swap between the Yankees and the Nats. Yet Powell was drawing only half the $10,000 wage that Chapman commanded. It's baseball's screwy salary system.

Lou Gehrig is presenting something of a logical argument when he points out that his durability at first base during the past 12 years has permitted the Yankees to sell $103,000 worth of unneeded first basemen to other clubs. Never has Gehrig needed an understudy, thus, he points out, the Yankees have been saving an extra salary during those past 12 years.

Gehrig's case recalls to this department the perennial squawking of Clark Griffith, who was always bemoaning his outlay for an understudy for Joe Judge even when that first baseman was one of the stars at his position.

After Judge's retirement, however, Griffith was able to laugh at the history of the Judge case. "He always made it necessary for me to have two first basemen on my pay roll, durn it," said Griff. "For some reason, Judge always went into a slump when there was nobody around fighting him for his job.

"Whenever I went out and got another first baseman, though, that Judge was unbeatable. He fielded like the star he was, he'd hit home runs, no other first baseman could touch him. But the moment I thought it was okay to get rid of his understudy and save that salary, and did it, Judge would go bad on me. I had to keep two first basemen on the pay roll to get the best work out of one. Judge probably cost me $50,000 in extra salaries. But he was worth it."

Vanderbilt Buys Chanceview For $100,000 West Coast Race

By Walter Haight.

Chanceview, 5-year-old gelding which scored a sensational victory at Santa Anita last Saturday, will carry the colors of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt in the $100,000 added West Coast classic on February 27. The owner of the Sagamore Farm announced by telegraph yesterday that he had purchased the gelded son of Chance Shot—Lookup from W. F. Flanigan, a Kentuckian, but did not mention the price he paid.

In view of a report that A. A. Baroni offered $20,000 for the gelding and was turned down, the figure reputedly was around $25,000.

Before going postward in a field of eligibles for the rich Santa Anita Handicap last Saturday, Chanceview was held at odds of 100 to 1 by betting commissioners. Following the race his odds were cut to 15 to 1. Chanceview defeated his field by 12 lengths in the mud. Behind the gelding were Indian Broom, Boxthorn, Mr. Bones, Tempestuous, Star Shadow, Mary Nell and Sobriety. Chanceview was thought to have little chance in the race and paid a $30.60 mutuel.

VANDERBILT.

The purchase of Chanceview is believed to be an admission by Vanderbilt that he and Trainer Bud Stotler do not fancy the chances of Sobriety or any of the other Cerise and White horses for the rich event. Inasmuch as the track has been muddy for a majority of the meeting to date, Chanceview has drawn many backers during the last few days.

Vanderbilt met crushing disappointment in the race last year. Discovery, since retired to the stud, was his hope and Trainer Stotler believed he had the son of Display in best form. However, after being slightly bothered at the start, Discovery ran in dull fashion being tenth turning into the stretch and finally drew up to seventh, a badly beaten horse. Discovery was a heavily played favorite in the race won by A. A. Baroni's Top Row. Vanderbilt did not have an entry in 1935 when Fred Alger, jr., watched Azucar hug the rail all the way to win. Azucar is a candidate for the $50,000 Widener at Hialeah.

The gelding raced only 11 times

National Title Race Shares Spotlight

A. A. U. Meet at Shoreham Probably Best Ever Held in the City.

Presenting powerful Peter Fick, the national 110-yard champion, on the same program with a national championship race, the District A. A. U. holds one of the biggest swimming meets of its history tomorow night in the Shoreham Pool. A series of keen struggles among 45 hightly rated men and women speedsters makes the event probably the finest ever held here.

Although the men's junior national 150-yard backstroke championship stands out on the list of events, of even more interest to Washington residents is Fick's race with Bobby (Peanuts) Jordan, the Central High boy now attending Massanutten Military Academy. Jordan is racing in Pittsburgh tonight, but his coach, Leslie Fouts, expects him to be ready to toe the mark against Fick tomorrow.

Sole conqueror of the world's record-holding Fick in the latter's prep school career, the stringy Jordan will be meeting a rival highly anxious to get another crack at him. Fick, now attending Staunton Military Academy, still rankles at the defeat Jordan dealt him a few weeks ago and wrote the A. A. U. that he has "a bone to pick in Washington."

Boggs to Seek Title.

Both Jordan and Fick prefer the 100-yard distance and it is over this distance that they have been rematched. A third race threatens both the Olympic star and the Washintgon boy, namely, Otto Schaffhauser, of the Broadwood Swimming Club of Philadelphia. Schaffhauser's fastest times have matched Jordan's. Some 20 entries are set to go in the "100," but this trio tops the field.

Fick will also race in the 200-yard event where he will meet Irving McCaffrey, of Massanutten, national scholastic champion, and a dozen other rivals including Ernie Boggs, middle distance champion of the District.

The backstroke classic will also find Boggs gunning for the National title against a field including such standouts as Daniel Hogan, of the Penn A. C.; Paul Wilson, of the Central Y. M. C. A., and Daniel Weiner, of the Baltimore Y. M. C. A.

The women's events will find a brilliant coterie of the fair ones set for action. Rivaling the freestyle battle among Fick, Jordan and Schaffhauser, will be women's backstroke race in which June Booth, beautiful little star of the Shoreham Club, will be Washington's hope against comely Dorothy Forbes, of Philadelphia, alternate on the Olympic team.

Anne Aronson, of the Ambassador, District indoor champion, Margaret Russell, of Baltimore, South Atlantic champion, and Dorothy Lubin, of Philadelphia, are among those who will make it far from a two-girl race between the Misses Booth and Forbes.

Other colorful events on the program include the men's high diving and a 100-yard breast-stroke race involving Margaret Hoffman, the Washington girl who swam on the Olympic team of 1932; Ethel Hessler, of Philadelphia; Helen Richardson, former District champion, and Miss Russell, the petite Baltimore flash. Two 50-yard freestyle races, one for boys and one for girls, complete the calendar. The list of entries includes the following:

Sailing Event To Stormy Weather

By the Associated Press.

Nassau, Bahamas, Feb. 11.—Stormy Weather, a 54-foot yawl that crossed the Atlantic to win a race to Norway, captured the annual Miami-Nassau sailing classic on the basis of handicap time today.

Mandoo 2d., D. Spencer Berger's 71-footer from New Haven, Conn., crossed the finish line first, 28½ hours after leaving Miami, despite the loss of two jibs in the blustery crossing, but placed third on corrected time of 26:45:12.

Roderick Stephens, jr., of New York, brought Stormy Weather into port two hours after the Mandoo 2d, but his corrected time was 25:12:34. The 30-foot Babe, owned by Hugh Matheson, of Miami, smallest of the 19 racers, took 36 hours 22 minutes on the 184-mile course, but corrected time of 26:05:15 gave her second place.

The schooner Water Witch, from New York, which took last year's event on corrected time of 17:08:36, made only 28:36:39 this time to finish seventh, back of Actaea, Starlight and Sirocco.

Two schooners came to grief. R. M. Demere's Katherine, from Savannah, Ga., lost her mainmast early in the race and took a tow from the Coast Guard cutter Mojave. Voyager, owned by Arthur L. Dupree, of Jacksonville, blew her mainsail, but came in under her own power.

stalled, or something. Anyway, Dusek was able to flop over quickly, grab Katan with remarkably dexterity and pin him long enough to be counted out. All very quaint and amusing.

Referee Benny Bortnick thought he was being smart in the semi-final between Stanley Pinto and Laverne Baxter, a couple of roughnecks. Baxter and Pinto are noted for pulling shirts off the backs of referees, so Bortnick wore two shirts. Baxter tore both shirts off and Pinto won in 14 minutes.

G. W. High Five Bows, 36-30, To Gonzaga

Gonzaga's brilliant Purple five stormed to its twelfth victory in 13 starts yesterday, defeating the towering tossers of George Washington High, 36-30, in a furious struggle on the I Streeters' court.

A driving last-period finish, led by two little whirling dervishes, Chip Collins and Jerry Connally, Gonzaga's midget sharpshooters, broke a 25-25 deadlock and swept the Purple to a well-earned victory. Connally, a sub forward, was inserted in the last quarter because of his coolness and a deadly eye, and he came through.

Roosevelt Five, Central Meet Tonight

INTERHIGH STANDINGS.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Eastern	5	2	.714
Western	5	2	.714
Roosevelt	4	2	.667
Tech	3	3	.500
Central	2	4	.333
Wilson	0	6	.000

By John R. Vosburgh.

Eager to keep in hte foreground of the inter-high basketball picture, Roosevelt High attempts to rub out Central in the big game of a double-header tonight in Tech's gymnasium. Eastern hits the home stretch of a schedule 25 per cent easier than that of Western or Roosevelt, its two serious rivals, meeting Wilson in the opening game at 7:30 p. m.

Although the Rough Riders are well groomed for their second meeting with Central, they face a far rockier road to the title than Eastern. In addition to toppling the Dark Blue, Roosevelt must demolish both Western and Eastern, the first place teams.

Eastern's champions, with a set-up tonight in Wilson's "baby" team of the series, must tackle Tech and Roosevelt after tonight's game which they are sure of winning. Western, on the other hand, has Central, Roosevelt and Tech to overcome. Thus Eastern clearly has a smoother row to hoe.

Roosevelt's chances of subduing Central are scarcely any better than they were on January 15 when it halted the Mount Pleasanters, 24 to 22. On that occasion, the Rough Riders overcame a 12-to-4 lead, thanks to Ray Fridrick, burly forward, who found the hoop for 11 points, including the foul shot which broke a 19-to-19 tie in the waning moments.

Vermillion Is Problem.

Billy Vermillion, Central's captain and the leading scorer of the series, will be Roosevelt's big worry. It was Vermillion's eight points, including two baskets in the waning moments which kept Central on even terms in the first game between the schools. The Raymen are due for a victory, incidentally, having lost four games in the series to date.

Capt. Joe Comer, of Roosevelt, as well as Frank Bailey, looms as a major scoring threat. Bill Fogel and Irving Wicklein will complete the starting cast for the Rough Riders. Coach Herman Littman is taking no chances against the team which handed Eastern its first and worst beating of the series, a 24-to-17 defeat.

Chralie Clark and Sam Fox are due to start for Central, with Ralph Matera, Bill Heygster, Felix Silverstein and Hymie Goldblatt sure to see action.

The Eastern-Wilson game comes as more or less of a workout session for the champs, with Coach Mike Kelley using the occasion as a primer for his final drive toward the title. Wilson, showing improvement with every game, will be bidding to better its high-scoring of the season, the 20-point level.

Columbiana Wins at Hialeah

Filly Handled Expertly by Le Blanc

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 11.—One of racing's rarities, a three-horse race, topped a scratch-riddled program here this afternoon. The Key West Purse, 1-mile test for 4-year-olds and upward, was reduced to this number of starters after overnight rain converted the racing strip into deep, holding mud. W. J. (Buddy) Hirsch's filly, Columbiana, proved best in the going, scoring by a length and a half over F. L. Flanders' Blind Pig, the outsider. Mrs. Emil Denemark, who formerly owned Blind Pig, was represented by Two Bob. This filly trailed throughout the running, losing the place by three lengths.

Although the field was small, Columbiana, the $4.20-for-2 choice, and Blind Pig provided an exciting contest. The winner required 1:38 to plough through the 8 furlongs under lightweight of 104 pounds. There was straight betting only on the race. Finance, Two Bob's stablemate, and Bulwark were scratched.

Columbiana, a daughter of the excellent mudder Petee-Wrack, was perfectly handled by Hubert Le Blanc, who, earlier in the day had won with the long-priced Wise Bun. The boy rated his mount close behind Blind Pig's pace, moved up steadily around the bend, and urged the Hirsch colorbearer into a narrow advantage entering the stretch. Blind Pig held on well but Columbiana gradually drew away in the last furlong. Two Bob, while making up ground, could not seriously threaten the leaders.

Selections at Hialeah.

Dear Al,

Despite the fact that many of the horses at this track are running two and three times a week, there is not a scarcity of horses. That Hialeah is plentifully supplied is shown by a canvas of the stables. According to the figures of Al Nun, official registrar, there are 1,448 horses on the grounds which include about 40 per cent 2-year-olds. There are 411 owners and 269 male trainers while two women, Mary Hirsch and Hambla Bauer, hold trainer's licenses. One hundred and forty women are among the owners of horses at this track. The track was muddy for the first time during the meeting. It took a good mudder to get anywhere in the going. There was many tear-dimmed eyes at Hialeah yesterday when it was learned that W. O. Gettman had passed away. Gettman was the proprietor of the Oliver Hotel, headquarters for horsemen and turf followers. His intimate friends were legion. He had a cuff as large as a circus tent. Many a tale is told of the instances where the generous fellow checked off bills for the boys who were down on their luck. The first 2-year-old stake of the year in Florida will be run Saturday. It is the Nursery No. 1 and is for colts and geldings. There are 109 nominations for the race.

BILL.

First race—Stormy Sea has had some education and appears ready to score in this maiden field. Tall Princess is well recommended by good trials and may be the one to beat. Maezonia may be one of the Maemere Farm's good ones.

Second race—Durwrack will like the off track and has recent races that point to a good effort in this field. Aunt Flor fits well in this field and is dangerous. Dixie Princess may account for the third money.

Third race—York appears to be a standout in this company. Needs only the right ride from Joe Wagner. Canard has plenty of early speed and breaks off the rail. Golden Hind is a possibility on an off track.

Fourth race—Little Dinah may find this field to her liking and take the main part of the purse. She will have the fleet Queen Vic to beat. Touche and Marinell, two that operated in Maryland last fall, are threats on an off track.

Fifth race—Epitaph has the speed to overcome the outside post position in this race and shapes up as a good wager. Monk's Gold and Loloma for the minor awards.

Sixth race—Brandon Prince may take this purse. He gets in with 115 pounds, thanks to the apprentice allowance and probably will end the winning streak of Hermie Roy. Play Chance to take care of the others.

Seventh race—The Doris Entry of Great Haste and Ridge Mor seems best in this sprint, although they are the high weight of the party.

Best bet—Brandon Prince.

All Major Items Show Increases Except Fuel and Light.

New York, Feb. 11.—The cost of living of wage earners advanced sharply, .9 per cent from December, 1936, to January, 1937, according to the monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board. Increases were noted in each of the major divisions of the budget, except fuel and light. The cost of living in January, 1937, was 3.6 per cent higher than a year ago and 21.2 per cent higher than in April, 1933, the low point during the depression, but it was still 12.9 per cent below the January, 1929, level.

Food prices rose 2 per cent from December to January. Since January, 1936, they have risen 3.5 per cent and since the low point of the depression, 21.4 per cent, but they were 17.6 per cent lower than in January, 1929.

Rents increased 5 per cent from December to January, which made them 11.2 per cent higher than in January, 1936, and 31.1 per cent higher than January, 1934, when they had reached their low point. Rents in January, 1937, were 10.7 per cent lower than in January, 1929.

Clothing prices increased 3 per cent from December to January. While clothing prices in January, 1937, had advanced 22.4 per cent over the low point of the spring of 1933, in January of this year they were 3 per cent lower than in January, 1936, and 25.2 per cent lower than in January, 1929.

The fuel and light index for January was 2 per cent lower than that for December. This decline was due to a drop of 9 per cent in the cost of gas and electricity, data concerning which are collected as of January and July of each year. Little change was noted in coal prices. The cost of fuel and light in January, 1937, was 6 per cent lower than in January, 1936, and 8.7 per cent lower than in January, 1929.

The cost of sundries in January, 1937, was 5 per cent higher than in December; 1.6 per cent higher than a year ago, and 6.2 per cent higher than the low point of depression, but 4.7 per cent lower than in January, 1929.

The purchasing value of the dollar was 115.1 cents in January, as compared with 116.1 cents in December, 119.2 cents in January, 1936, and 100 cents in 1923.

Excess Reserves Rise $30,000,000

Excess reserves of Federal Reserve System member banks climbed $30,000,000 during the week ended February 10, after remaining stationary for two weeks.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last night that these idle funds, which are over and above those required behind deposits, aggregated $2,180,000,000.

To prevent excess reserves from providing a foundation for a possibly injurious credit inflation, the Reserve Board recently ordered a 33 1-3 per cent increase in reserve requirement.

When the increase in requirements is fully effective, excess reserves are expected to stand at around $500,000,000 to $600,000,000. The Reserve Board feels this will be ample to provide a continuance of "easy money" conditions.

For the week ended February 10, the board reported today money in circulation increased $12,000,000, to $6,360,000,000 or $397,000,000 over the same week last year. Monetary gold stock climbed $23,000,000 to a new all-time peak of $11,387,000,000.

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation in a preliminary report for the year ended December 31 placed consolidated net income at $7,379,204, equal to 70 cents a share on the common stock, against $2,798,869, or 24 cents a share in 1935.

With 32 subsidiary companies the company has 40 manufacturing plants in the United States and Canada. Headquarters are in New York.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Confronting suspension of trade tomorrow on American exchanges, whereas Winnipeg and Liverpool will be open, pre-holiday profit-taking pulled prices here down late today. From an early upturn of 1⅛ cents, Chicago wheat values receded 1⅝, but rallied a little at the last. The temporary gain carried the market up to $1.36¾ a bushel for Chicago May delivery, almost equaling the season's peak record.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛-½ under yesterday's finish, May, 135⅜-½; July, 117⅛-¼; September, 113¼-⅜. Corn, ¼-¾ down; May, 109-109⅛; July, 103½-⅝; September, 96⅝. Stocks Advance on Strike Settlement but Terms Meet Mixed Reception.

New York, Feb. 11.—After the first shout over settlement of the motor strike had died away doubts began to arise over the possible consequences of what appeared to be a victory for industry, as one important question—how far labor could go with a sit-down strike—was given no conclusive answer. Practically, the sit-down strike brought no penalty to the strikers who showed that, without opposition by authorities, they could sit in defiance of court injunctions. Stocks, nevertheless, rose on expectation of greater industrial activity and closed higher in active trading. High-grade bonds softened again, particularly the Federal issues. May wheat closed a quarter of a cent lower at 135¼ cents a bushel.

News that a settlement had been arrived at in the General Motors strike was by all odds the prevailing influence at the opening of financial markets. A settlement has naturally been taken for granted, the only uncertainty being the length of the period of idleness and the terms. Throughout the strike the stock market has maintained a fairly steady tone, on its usual custom of not growing greatly depressed over strike news. The stoppage of work nevertheless has slowed down the rate of improvement in allied industries to some extent. On the surface the resumption of work at the General Motors plant is a bullish development.

How far the markets should go in celebrating the motors settlement is a matter of speculation. It would appear that Lewis has won an important point, which was to secure recognition of his leadership as a union organizer. Perhaps General Motors was successful to the extent that it retains for the time being the open shop principle, but Lewis now is free to proceed against other companies and industries, and in the meantime another wage increase has been ordered for General Motors, although that was not an issue of the strike.

Higher Wages.

So long as Lewis looks about for new fields of conquest the markets are bound to be unsettled, and especially since the Michigan battle proved that public officials are not especially interested in upholding property right. Wage increases for General Motors and Chrysler, announced for the latter last night, will tend to cut down the profit margin, or to lift the prices of motor cars. Benefits of the strike ending ought to be felt most keenly in the accessories trades and in the steel and tire industries and transporation, and the markets today seemed to feel that way about it.

Looking at markets at a longer distance, some hint may be given next week of what to expect in the way of further credit control, after the meeting planned for Monday among the Federal Reserve Board, SEC and Treasury officials. Secretary Morgenthau was quoted as saying that "the continued inflow of foreign capital is a source of worry to us." It also seems to worry President Roosevelt, and Gov. Eccles as well.

What they propose to do about it is a question, but they seem to be worried because they fear withdrawal of foreign funds would involve heavy sales of American securities, and possibly a tightening of the money markets as well. It does not seem probable that the situation in this country will become so bad or that conditions abroad will turn so attractive that any early sudden and large scale withdrawals of capital are likely to take place. Immigration on a large scale of capital does nevertheless present a problem for a country already in a creditor position, already stuffed with unneeded gold and with abundant inflationary materials at hand. That is especially true when, as with us, we need greater purchasing power abroad for our merchandise exports.

Motor Earnings.

Chrysler's earnings last year were about $2 a share higher than indicated by the amount of dividends paid in 1936. First quarter earnings also should reflect the sales that probably were obtained at General Motors' expense. From now on the profit margin may be reduced by the wage increase announced. The same is true of General Motors. In announcing a new increase, President Sloan said the expense bill would be increased by $25,000,000. This increase with the one made last autumn will add $55,000,000 to wages, or about $1.25 a share on the stock.

Credit Inflation.

John A. Reilly, president, Second National Bank, addressed the Columbia Regional Conference of Associated Retail Credit Men, this week on the subject of "Retail Credit Inflation—Is it a Possibility or a Fact?" Pointing out the difficulties involved in a definite determination of inflation as an actual fact, Mr. Reilly discussed many of the elements that lead to it.

He said, "This thing we call inflation is designed to stimulate commodity prices. If historical precedents mean anything at all we can safely predict that wages will not increase to the same extent as commodity prices in an inflationary program.

"Our greatest need today is a thorough understanding of how credit facilities may be used as an aid to distribution. Credit as originally understood was intended as an aid to production. In this field it has performed a magnificent service.

"You retailers are the caterers to human needs," he emphasized. "You largely control the ability of consumers to buy the ordinary necessities of life on a credit basis. If you can assist in devising a system that will enable them to absorb the fruits of production, you will have largely paved the way for a lasting prosperity."

Bank Clearings Lower Against Previous Week

Total for 21 Cities Is 29.4% Over 5-Day Week a Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 11.—Bank clearings in the United States declined during the latest week from the high amount recorded in the previous period. The total for 22 leading cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, for the week ended February 10, was $5,620,866,000, or a rise of 29.4 per cent over the $4,345,145,000 in the same five-day week of 1936.

This contrasted with a gain of 16.3 per cent in the similar comparison for 21 leading cities a week earlier. Because of the Lincoln's birthday holiday which was observed in most of the cities reporting last year, a fair comparison cannot be made between the two years.

The aggregate at New York City was $3,705,188,000, or 29.6 per cent in excess of the $2,859,535,000 a year ago. Outside centers totaled $1,915,678,000, which was 28.9 per cent higher than the $1,485,610,000 for the week of February 12, 1936.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 11.—Transatlantic stocks were active and strong and resisted profit-taking sales in good fashion. Rubber issues rose sharply in sympathy with the higher quotations for that commodity. Industrials were generally higher, silks and tobacco being in good demand while oils and mining stocks held at steady prices. Gilt-edged securities closed quiet and fractionally lower, while railroad issues were mixed.

Paris.—The Bourse closed with a mixed tone, banking, coal and railroad shares showing declines for the day and rentes finished 20 to 45 centimes net lower. Bank of France reacted 145 francs and Royal Dutch remained unchanged. Suez Canal shares advanced 40 francs.

Liverpool.—Continued continental demand for Argentine wheat and a firm market at Buenos Aires caused prices to advance ½d to ¾d. Cotton futures closed unchanged to 2 points higher, prices advancing on scattered buying, principally for local account. The agreement in the American automobile strike attracted some demand.

Veiled Gunwoman Stages Third Cafe Holdup in N. Y.

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—A veiled soft-voiced young gunwoman, whose nonchalant restaurant holdups numbered three, was sought tonight with the scantiest of clews.

The police knew only that she wears a coal black coat and hat to match the shade of her eyes, had "fine features" and a thin patrician face. She looks about 26 and not big enough to do much harm—5½ feet tall and weighing about 115 pounds.

This description came early today from the flustered young manager of all-night restaurant victim No. 3—a Broadway chain cafe.

The manager, Albert Swank, 22, said she bought cigarettes, opened her purse to drop them in—and then let him see what else lay there in the purse. It was a small, shiny pistol, and she fingered the trigger.

"Give me what you have," she said, in what Swank described as a "nice quiet voice." (She got $20, to add to a total of $57 in two other similar robberies, all performe within eight days.)

Attack Is Made On Competitive Civil Service

25% of Employes of New Deal Agencies Would Lose Jobs, Claim.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, yesterday told the House Civil Service Committee that many Government employes in the New Deal agencies will lose their jobs if the civil service is extended to them on a competitive basis.

Testifying on the Ramspeck bill to extend the civil service to all employes who pass competitive examinations, Mitchell said that probably 25 per cent would lose out, whereas in noncompetitive examinations, as proposed by the President's Reorganization Commission, only about 10 per cent would fail to pass.

He said that a grade of 90 probably would be necessary for an employe to hold his job if the examinations are thrown open to all comers, whereas 70 is the passing grade in a noncompetitive test.

Both Mitchell and Kenneth C. Vipond, assistant chief examiner, said that the change to civil service in the New Deal agencies could be accomplished in a more orderly fashion if the examinations are restricted.

They said that experienced employes should be retained regardless of whether or not they could make as high grades as persons outside the service.

Chairman Ramspeck argued that competitive examinations would give all persons an equal opportunity. His plan was indorsed by Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana.

The hearing will continue today beginning at 10:30 a. m.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press

The Netherlands guilder broke sharply in foreign exchange dealing yesterday, continuing the downward movement which became apparent Wednesday.

The Dutch unit was quoted in New York at 54.48 cents, off .16 of a cent from yesterday's close. Until yesterday, it was understood, the Netherlands official control had kept the currency stable at around 54.76 cents, but largely withdrew its support during the day.

Other currencies fluctuated narrowly in the New York market. The pound sterling was unchanged at $4.89⅞. French francs rose .00⅛ of a cent at 4.66⅞ cents and the Swiss franc, at 22.82½ cents, was off .00½ of a cent. Canadian dollars remained unchanged.

The dollar in London lost ¼ of a cent at 4.89⅛ to the pound, unchanged as compared with the New York overnight rate. In Paris it ended at the equivalent of 4.663 cents to the franc against the New York overnight rate of 4.664 cents.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Feb. 11 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agric.).—Business in spot domestic wools was very slow today and only a few small transactions took place.

Prices held about steady on the limited quantities sold, being mostly on the low side of ranges prevailing during the last two to three weeks.

As a result of the slackening in demand, the recent extreme selling prices were not being realized in current trading.

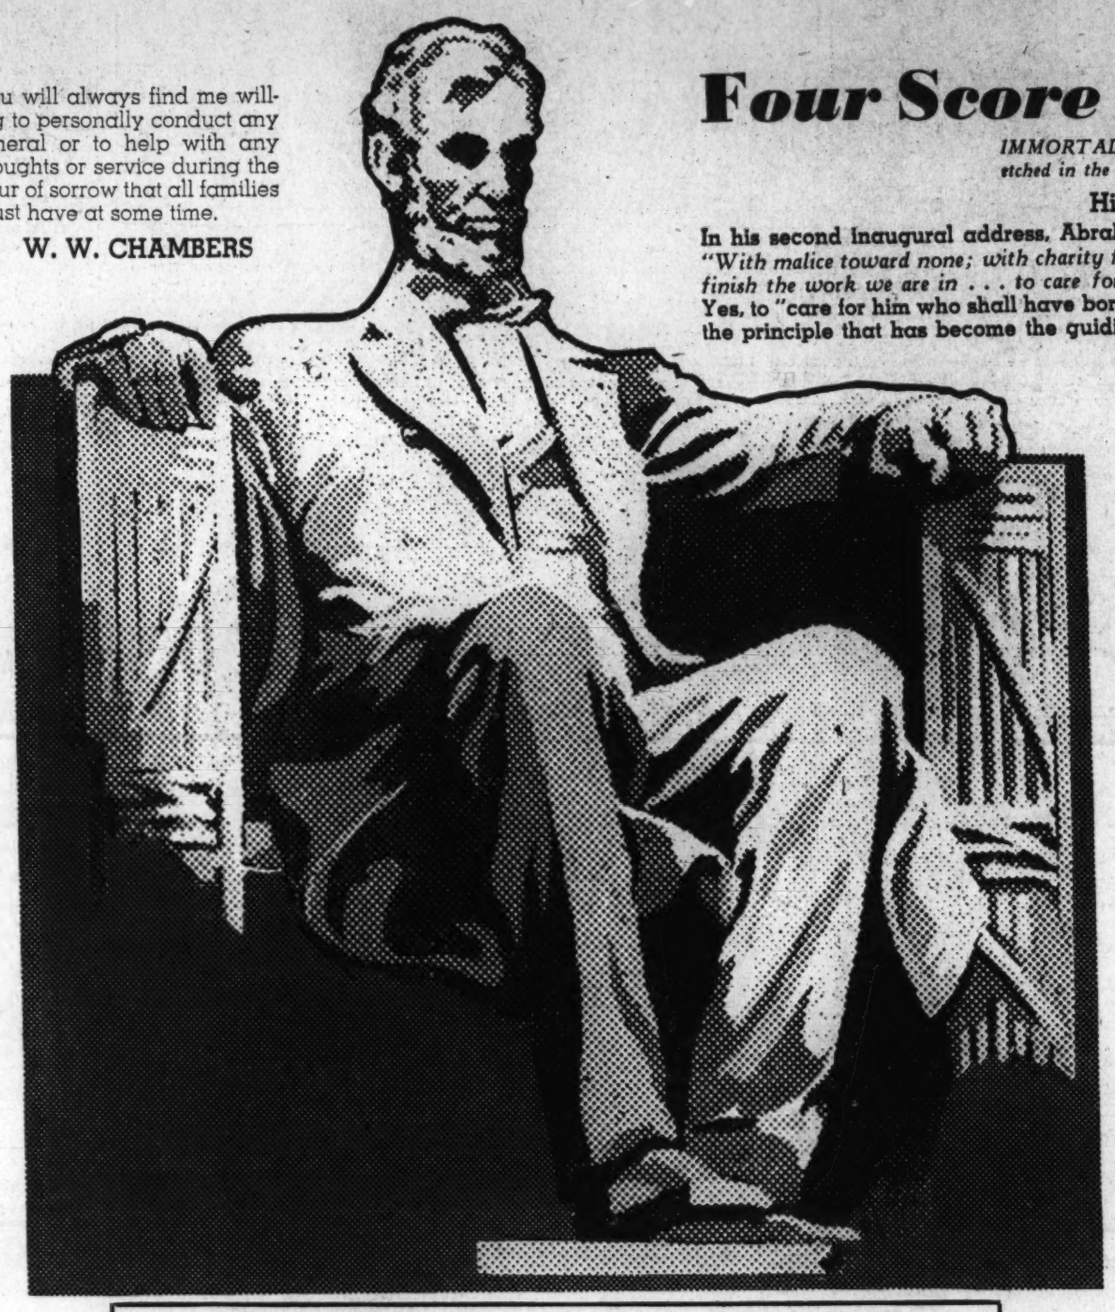
A Tribute to Abraham Lincoln and a Promise . . by The Greater Chambers Co.

ONE OF THE LARGEST UNDERTAKERS IN THE WORLD

You will always find me willing to personally conduct any funeral or to help with any thoughts or service during the hour of sorrow that all families must have at some time.

W. W. CHAMBERS



Four Score and Seven Years Ago...

IMMORTAL words by a man whose deeds and accomplishments are forever etched in the Halls of Time . . . an immortal, whose name will live forever!

His ideals are the ideals of Chambers!

In his second inaugural address, Abraham Lincoln said:
"With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in . . . to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan . . ."
Yes, to "care for him who shall have borne the battle of life, and for his widow and orphans," that has been the ideal and the principle that has become the guiding star of The Greater Chambers Co.

A Lincoln Ideal That is Maintained by CHAMBERS Today . . .

The people of Washington have responded to our policy—by making The Greater Chambers Co. one of the largest undertakers in the world. And this response has made it possible for us to offer you the finest service and equipment. And yet, Chambers' prices are within the reach of all. Whether a family has $75 to spend for a funeral or $500, they can come to Chambers with the confidence and the knowledge, that here they will be given the full resources of one of the largest undertakers in the world.

The Man Whose Father Buried Abraham Lincoln is Still With CHAMBERS!

The father of R. K. Harvey (a Chambers man) buried Abraham Lincoln

Steeped in the Lincoln tradition, Mr. Harvey is indeed a fine example of the high-class type of men which comprise this organization. His background and experience are available to Chambers patrons.

G. C. ECHOLS

Has progressed with the firm since childhood and now is supervising Manager of all our funeral homes.

W.W.CHAMBERS

Started his business career at the age of 17 on August 10, 1911. He conducted business four years before reaching 21. This great institution is the growth of an idea visualized by him when he was only a boy. This idea has developed into a successful achievement.

W. F. ELLIOTT

General Manager of all Chambers Funeral Homes. Has 35 years' experience in handling of funerals.

ROBERT E. TOLSON

GEORGE H. MIHM

Mr. Mihm takes care of insurance, certificates and handles all details for our patrons. A Chambers service.

We Believe It is Our Public Duty to . . .

ADVERTISE TRUTH—Not Hide It!

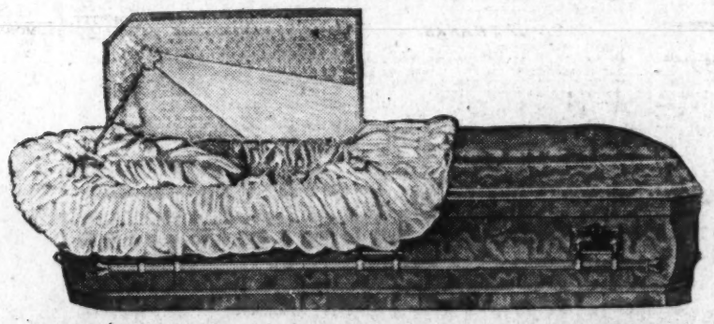
The people of Washington want to know the true facts about funeral services. Therefore, we always state our prices plainly. We tell you what a complete funeral includes, such as cars, hearses, use of chapels and parlors, paper notices and the many personal services, in fact over 60 items of service. We feel it is only fair to give complete information and not blanket the facts as do old-time undertakers. The reason we are the largest undertakers in Washington is because we live up to our claims.

All Chambers' cars, hearses, ambulances and funeral equipment are the very last word.

We are always glad to have the opportunity to come and talk about the funeral needs of a family without in any way making the bereaved feel obligated to us. We feel that, as one of the largest undertakers in the world, it is our duty to come and give you aid, when you want it. Simply call us—and we'll come and give you the benefit of our many years' experience.

HOW WE DO IT

Chambers conducts the greatest number of funerals per population than any undertaker in the world, and is "one of the largest undertakers in the world." Naturally we are enabled to buy our merchandise in carload lots. This saving we pass on to our patrons in our lower prices.



This beautiful couch casket, as shown above, with hearse, cars, embalming, burial case for casket, and all that is furnished with a fine funeral—together with 60 items of service. By Chambers for only.....

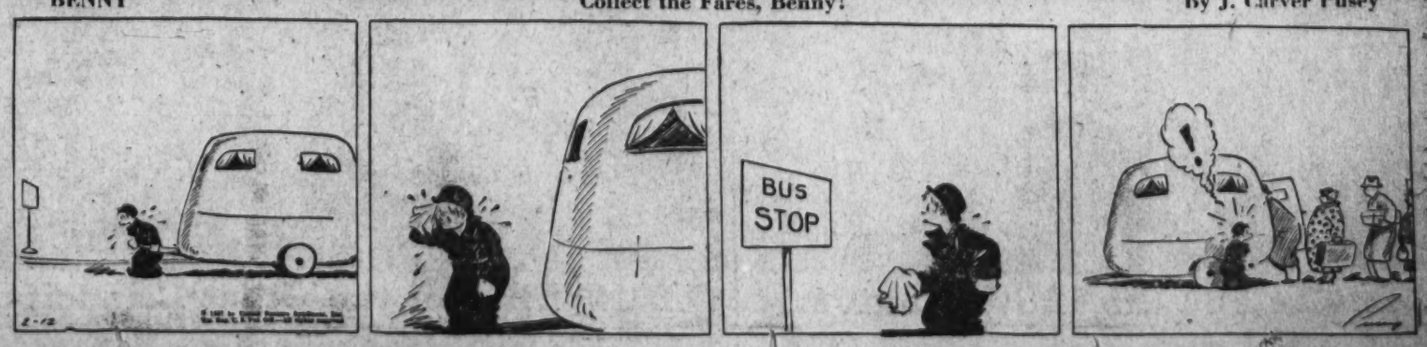
MARTHA ORR

BENNY — Collect the Fares, Benny! — By J. Carver Pusey



This Is the Young Lady Who Draws

Apple Mary

Martha Orr, Creator of "Apple Mary"

WHEN MARTHA ORR was going to school, a very few years ago, she had no idea that one day she was to become an overnight success as a cartoonist. She did want to become an artist, however, and after being graduated from high school in Spokane, Washington, she went to the Chicago Art Institute. Now let Miss Orr go on with the story.

"IT WAS all my Uncle's fault," she says. (Her uncle is the famous Carey Orr, who draws the political cartoons for the Chicago Tribune.) "He kept insisting that I should do a cartoon strip. I kept trying to think of something that wasn't already being done and finally hit upon the idea of a kindly, grandmotherly sort of woman who, through poverty, would know the seamy side of life and would be always helping others out of their troubles.

"THAT'S HOW APPLE MARY came into existence. You can imagine how surprised I was when the first syndicate to which I offered the strip bought it immediately. I understand it has really been quite successful since."

MISS ORR is certainly correct in her "understanding." APPLE MARY was purchased by 98 of the first 100 newspapers to which it was offered and has been going great guns ever since its first appearance about two years ago.
